TEALING is a parish lying south of the Sidlaw range of hills, its kirktown being 6 miles north of Dundee; the parish is 4 miles in extent from east to west by a breadth varying from 1 to 4½ miles, and is bounded north and north-east by Inverarity, east and south-east by Murroes, north-west-by-south by Mains and Strathmartine and west by Auchterhouse and Glamis; it is in the small debt court district of Dundee. In this parish are found grey slate, moorstone and freestone. John Glass, founder of the sect designated "Glassites," and born at Dundee 21 Sept. 1698, was educated at St. Andrews, and subsequently became minister of Tealing previous to his deposition by the Church of Scotland; in England his followers were called "Sandemanians," from Robert Sandeman, who married

Glass's daughter and became an elder in the sect; Glass died at Dundee in 1773. There are Established and United Free churches. The Earl of Home K.T., T.D. and Walter T. J. Scrymsoure-Steuart-Fothringham esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,980 acres; rateable value, £5,829; population in 1911, 588 civil, 602 ecclesiastical.

GALLOWAY

THIS is an ancient district in the south-west of Scotland, including the present counties of Kirkcudbright and Wigtown. The family of Stewart, Earls of Galloway and Barons Garlies, take their title from this district, and it also gives a name to the second diocese in the united diocese of Glasgow and Galloway.

HADDINGTONSHIRE,

OR EAST LOTHIAN lies on the southern side of the entrance to the Firth of Forth, its north-western border being bounded by that estuary and its north-eastern by the North Sea, its northern angle lying due south from Crail and Fifeness, on the opposite shore of the Frith, Berwickshire bounding it on the south and Edinburghshire on the west. From east to west it extends 26 miles; from north to south, at the middle, 16; at the east end it is not more than 10 miles across, and at the west end about 12: its area comprises 170,971 acres of land and 569 of water. The population in 1901 was 38,665 and in 1911, 43,254, viz.:—Males, 21,463; females, 21,791. The number of inhabited houses in 1901 was 8,398, and in 1911, inhabited 9,416; uninhabited 1,059; building 53. In extent this is the twenty-fifth, and in population the twenty-second of counties in Scotland.

Early History.—Forming part of the Pictish kingdom in 81, it fell under the dominion of the Romans, and for nearly 3½ centuries formed part of their province of Valentia, until 410, when the Romans quitted the country, their departure being followed by a century of war, at the close of which, in 547, Ida, a Northman, managed to concentrate all the country from the Tees to the Forth under his sway: his grandson, Aethelfrith, was slain by Eadwine, Prince of Deira (or the country between the Tees and Humber), who then formed from these provinces the kingdom of Northumbria, bounded on the south by the Humber and north by the Forth, which continued as an appanage of England under kings or earls until 1057, when the portion north of the Tweed was incorporated into the kingdom of Scotland under Malcolm II. This county, with Edinburghshire, Linlithgow, and parts of Stirling and Roxburghshire, formed the district known as Lothean or Loudian, which suffered severely from English forays, notably those under Edward I., 1296; Edward II., previous to Bannockburn; Edward III., 1356; Richard II., 1385. Bothwell owned its strongest fortress, Dunbar, and thither he brought Queen Mary in 1567: Cromwell also concentrated his army at Dunbar in 1650, to be near his supplies, and at Doonhill defeated Major-General David Leslie: in 1745, when Prince Charles Edward, out-flanking and out-marching General Cope, entered the capital, Cope brought his forces by sea to Dunbar, and on the morning of the 22 September lay encamped on the level ground near the shore by Bankton House, in the parish of Prestonpans, when in the misty morning the small Highland army appeared on the hills towards Tranent, and swooping down on the English sent Cope to carry the news of his own defeat to the governor of Berwick. The old title of Earl of Dunbar is extinct, but those of Baron Blantyre, Earl of Haddington, and Baron Belhaven still remain.

Soil and Surface, Produce and Manufactures.—In point of soil, cultivation and produce, this county holds the first rank in Scotland, and in some of these respects, particularly the mode of husbandry, it will bear comparison with the most favoured districts in England. The principal elevations in Haddingtonshire above the level of the sea are Traprain Law, 724 feet; North Berwick Law, 612 feet; Soutra Hill, 1,209 feet; Spartleton Hill, 1,534 feet; Gilston, 1,362 feet, and Markle Says Law, 1,750 feet. The range of the Lammermuir hills occupies the south of the county, which may be divided into four districts. The northern is a sloping tract of land, with a fertile soil; south of this is a ridge of ground north of the Tyne, descending partly towards that river and partly towards the coast land, and comprehends a good proportion of the arable land of the county; the third tract is varying in breadth, elevated above the midlands, and continuing along the base of the Lammermuir hills, nearly the whole extent of the county; the fourth comprises this extensive range of mountains, commencing at the south-west extremity of the shire and terminating on the Berwickshire coast, by the high promontory called St. Abb's Head: the greater part of this range is moor, but between the hills are lands under a regular rotation of crops. Excellent gardens and orchards flourished in this county as early as the 12th century, and pulse seems to have been cultivated here in the 13th: the latter circumstance is attested by the fact of the English soldiers, during their siege of Dirleton Castle, having subsisted on the peas which grew in the adjacent fields. The fertility of East Lothian in the 17th century is ascertained by a passage in "Whitelock's Memoirs," where it is stated that the soldiers who accompanied Cromwell in his expedition into Scotland in 1650, were astonished to find in that district "the greatest plenty of corn they ever saw."

The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1914," were:—Oats, 15,311 acres; barley, including bere, 16,001; wheat, 5,677; beans (to be harvested as corn), 233; peas, 115; total of all corn crops, 37,337 acres; turnips and swedes, 14,502 acres; potatoes, 9,178; mangolds, 216; cabbage, 445; rape, 184; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 163; total of green crops, 25,678; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 10,949 acres; pasture (not for hay), 15,899 acres. The total area of the county is 170,971 acres of land, of which 39,161 were mountain and heath land (used for grazing), 22,376 permanent grass, 89,617 arable land, and 10,643 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1914 consisted of 2,978 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 419; other horses, 452; cows in milk, 1,712; cows in calf, but not in milk, 181; heifers in milk, 143; other cattle, two years and above, 4,600; one year and under two, 1,927; under one year, 1,063; total, 9,626; ewes kept for breeding, 42,559; other sheep, one year and under, 27,272; under one year, 56,683; total, 126,514; sows kept for breeding, 277; other pigs, 1,252.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 80; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 63; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 59; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 32; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 22; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 11; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 34; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 104; exceeding 300 acres, 168; total, 553.

The manufactures of this county are unimportant, and are carried on but to a limited extent; there are two woollen mills in the neighbourhood of the county town, whilst in other parts of the shire are brick and fireclay tile works, agricultural implement works, breweries and a distillery. Salt is manufactured in the vicinity of Prestonpans, coal also being wrought here and at Tranent, Ormiston and Pencaitland. So long ago as 1200, it is said, the monks of Newbattle worked a seam of this mineral at Prestongrange. Limestone is common over the county, and clay and sandstone are to be found. The climate in the Lowlands is on the whole genial and favourable for agriculture, whilst in the Lammermoor district it is colder and more liable to falls of rain and snow. The production of coal in the county in 1913 was 1,117,020 tons, value £468,345, and of fireclay, 22,562 tons, value £1,934; igneous rock, 21,731 tons; limestone, 16,248 tons; sandstone, 613 tons. The number of persons employed in mines and quarries in 1913 was, underground, 3,002; above ground, 704; total, 3,706.

Rivers &c.—Several streams intersect the county, but none of them merit the title of river except the Tyne, which, passing from Ormiston on the south-west by Haddington, falls into the sea at Tynninghame, where it forms a bay: the White Adder, Monynut and Eye rivers take their rise in the south of the county. The only railway in the county is the North British, which, entering the county a little north-west of Cockburnspath, runs close to the coast as far as Dunbar, thence turning westward it proceeds through Prestonkirk to Drem, where a branch goes north to North Berwick, and running to Longniddry it sends a branch south-east to Haddington and another north-east to Gullane and passes out of the county near Inveresk, from which place a branch passes through Ormiston to Macmerry, and from Ormiston through Saltoun to Gifford. The southern portion of the county does not posses any railways.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Haddington comprises 24 civil parishes and 25 ecclesiastical parishes and parts of 2 others, the whole being included within the presbyteries of Haddington, Dunbar and Dalkeith, in the synod of Lothian: Haddington, Dunbar and North Berwick are royal burghs; these, with Lauder (in Berwickshire) and Jedburgh (in Roxburghshire) formerly joined in sending one member to Parliament, but by the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," were included in their respective shires. The Police burghs are Cockenzie and Port Seton, East Linton, Prestonpans and Tranent. The county at large returns one representative. The parliamentary constituency for 1915 numbered 8,153.

ABERLADY is a parish and village, in the poor combination of East Lothian and small debt court district of Haddington; the parish is bounded on the north by the parish of Dirleton, east by Haddington, south by Gladsmuir and west by the Firth of Forth; the village, which lies on the south side of Aberlady Bay, has a station on a branch line (opened in April, 1898) from Longniddry to Gullane, of the North British railway, and is 15 miles east from Edinburgh. James VI., by charter, erected this parish into a temporal barony, which grant, it is said, was confirmed by Charles I. in 1663, but the privileges or immunities conferred thereby are now in abeyance. The parish church, rebuilt in the Gothic style, retains the ancient tower of the original church: there is also a United Free church. Bishop Gavin Douglas, of Dunkeld (d. 1522), granted to this parish the estate of Kilspindie, and the ruins of the house attached to it are still to be seen. There is a fine old market cross. A monument has been erected in memory of the local men who lost their lives in the war in South Africa (1899-1902). About half a mile distant on the north-east, is Luffness, a mansion belonging to Capt. George Everard Hope J.P. originally built in 1549, as a fortification, by the French general, De Thermes, as a protection against the garrison of Haddington, then in the possession of the English; near by stand the ruins of a Carmelite monastery founded by Patrick, 8th Earl of Dunbar, in 1286. The Earl of Wemyss and March D.L., J.P. who is the principal landowner, resides at Gosford House, nearly a mile south-west of the village: the mansion is surrounded by fine grounds, and contains a valuable collection of paintings. The area comprises 4,333 acres; rateable value, £10,070; the population of the parish in 1891 was 1,063, including 505 in the village, in 1901 950, with 442 in the village, and in 1911 963.

ATHELSTANEFORD is a parish and village in the East Lothian poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; the parish is bounded on the north by the parish of Dirleton, south and west by Haddington, and south and east by Prestonkirk; the village lies 5½ miles south from North Berwick, and 2 south-east from Drem station on the Dunbar and Edinburgh section of the North British railway; there is another station at East Fortune. Here is an Established church. In the early part of the 18th century, two men of eminent poetical genius—John Home, author of the tragedy of "Douglas," born at Ancrum, 22 Sept. 1722, and Robert Blair, born in 1699, and author of "The Grave," were successively ministers here. The manse occupied by the first mentioned stood opposite the present modern manse, near the west end of the churchyard, and the site is now comprised in the garden, where an apple tree is pointed out as having stood close to the window of the poet's study. On resigning his pastorial charge, which he did about 1756, Home retired to a mansion in the neighbourhood, and died 4 Sept. 1808: Blair died here 4 Feb. 1747, and in the centre of the village is a monument to his memory. The area comprises 5,061 acres; rateable value, £9,503; the population in 1911 was 666.

BARNS (EAST and WEST), see DUNBAR.

BELHAVEN, see DUNBAR.

NORTH BERWICK is a parish, seaport town, royal burgh and popular seaside resort, in the East Lothian poor combination; the town is the head of a sheriff district and small debt court, and up to 1885 was one of a group of 5 parliamentary burghs, when the representation was merged into the county; the boundaries of the parish are Dirleton on the west, Prestonkirk on the south, Whitekirk on the south and east, and the Firth of Forth on the north; the town stands on a bay, and is 23 miles north-east from Edinburgh, with a terminal station on the Drem and North Berwick branch of the North British railway. The town is lighted with gas from works the property of the Corporation, and is supplied with water by gravitation from works erected at a cost of over £70,000, the source of the supply being in the Lammermuir hills, about 14 miles south of the town. The beach affords excellent bathing facilities, and near the harbour is an open air swimming pond. There are golf links at the east and west ends of the parish, each with a course of 18 holes. The harbour, which is small, is formed by a tolerably good pier, but the rocks at the entrance allow only small vessels to enter: these can ride here in perfect safety, the harbour being boomed. North Berwick was erected into a royal burgh in 1363-1366 by a charter of King David II. and it appears to have been at that time a place of some trade. As a port it dates from the time of Robert II. and was one of the seventy royal burghs in existence at the time of the Union in 1707. James VI. granted to it in 1568 a new charter confirmatory of all its former privileges. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and five councillors. The sheriff's small debt court is held on the fourth Wednesday in January, and the second Wednesday in May and July and on the first Wednesday of October. There is an Established and two United Free churches, and a Roman Catholic church: the Episcopal church of St. Baldred, built in 1859, will seat 780 persons: the incumbency, net value £450, has been held since 1913 by the Rev. John Armstrong Hughes M.A. of Lincoln College, Oxford. Fidra roads, about 2 miles to the west, are considered a very safe anchorage. In the offing are several bleak islets, only of value as rabbit warrens, and 3 miles to the east, within 2 miles of the coast, is the Bass Rock, which is a mile in circumference, and rises 350 feet above the surface of the sea: the channel betwixt it and the land is very deep, and is frequently taken by steam vessels. The Bass is inaccessible on all sides except by a narrow pass on the south-west, toward the land. A caverned passage penetrates through the rock from east to west, which may be explored at low water. Commanding the landing place are the remains of a small fortification, which at one time was of considerable strength, and could then only be reached by ladders, or a bucket and chain: it existed as a stronghold for a long period, was a state prison during the reign of the two Stuarts, and became distinguished in the early part of the reign of William III. for the persevering fortitude with which it held out against the new dynasty. A lighthouse was erected in 1907 on the Bass, which is the resort of myriads of sea fowl, especially Solan geese. About 3 miles east of North Berwick are the interesting ruins of Tantallon Castle, referred to by Sir Walter Scott as the parting scene of Angus and Marmion, in his poem of "Marmion." About a quarter of a mile south-west are the extensive remains of an abbey, said to have been founded by Duncan, Earl of Fife, who died in 1154, for a sisterhood of Cistercian nuns: and directly south of the town rises North Berwick Law, a conical hill, the summit of which is 600 feet above the level of the sea. In the Harbour place stands a cross, erected in memory of Catherine Watson, who was drowned in the East Bay, 27 July, 1889, in attempting to save the life of a boy. Sir Walter Hamilton-Dalrymple bart. and Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 5,073 acres; rateable value, £48,484: area of burgh, 458 acres; the population in 1911 was 3,968, of whom 3,246 were in the burgh.

BOLTON is a parish and small village, the latter 3 miles south-west from Haddington, at which is the nearest railway station. The parish, which is bounded north by Haddington, east by Yester, south by Humbie, and west by Salton, is in the poor combination of East Lothian and small debt court district of Haddington. The parish church is a building in a modern Gothic style, with a square tower: there is also a United Free church. About the close of the 15th century the lands of Bolton were seized by the Hepburns, one of whom, John Hepburn, was executed, as the associate of the Earl of Bothwell, his chief, in the murder of Darnley. The principal seat in the parish is Eaglescarnie, the residence of Miss Stuart. The area comprises 3,101 acres; rateable value, £3,362; population in 1911 was 256.

COCKENZIE and PORT SETON.

COCKENZIE is a fishing village and a quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Tranent, situated on the shore of the Firth of Forth, and on the road to North Berwick, 1 mile north-east from Prestonpans station on the Dunbar and Edinburgh section of the North British railway. This place forms a police burgh conjointly with Port Seton, at which place a harbour, built at a cost of £11,000, mainly subscribed by the fishermen and aided by £2,000 from the late Earl of Wemyss and March (d. 1883), was opened in Sept. 1880, by Lady Elcho, late Countess of Wemyss and March (d. 1896). The small harbour at Cockenzie was constructed by Mr. Cadell. The school and master's house were presented to the village. Here are salt works. The principal landowners are the Earl of Wemyss and March D.L. and the trustees of John Polson esq. The area of the burgh is 67 acres. Rateable value, £7,401: the population in 1911, including Port Seton, was 2,400, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 2,572.

DIRLETON is a parish and village, in the poor combination of East Lothian and small debt court district of North Berwick. The parish is in the north-western extremity of the county, on the shore of the Firth of Forth, North Berwick lying to the east and Aberlady and Athelstaneford to the south, and is 20 miles east-north-east from Edinburgh, 7 north from Haddington, 4½ north-east from Aberlady, and nearly 3 south-west from North Berwick, with a station about a mile to the south-east on the Drem and North Berwick branch of the North British railway. The village is seated at the head of a low meadow, which extends about a mile and a half towards the sea, and the houses nearly surround an extensive triangular green interspersed with trees. On the south side of this space stands the ruins of Dirleton Castle, which belonged in the 9th century to a noble family, named De Vallibus or De Vaux, from whom it was taken, after a tedious siege, by Edward I. in 1298. In 1650 it was reduced and dismantled by the parliamentary general Lambert. About the middle of the 15th century this castle and the estate bestowed the title of baron on the Halyburton family. The eventual heiress, Janet Halyburton, married William, 2nd Lord Ruthven, and her grandson, Lord Ruthven and Dirleton, was created Earl of Gowrie in 1581, but this title was forfeited in 1600. In 1646 Sir James Maxwell was created Earl of Dirleton, but the title became extinct on his death. From ancient documents it would appear that a collegiate church was founded here in 1444, by Sir Walter Halyburton, but little is known of its character or site. The parish church, which stands a little below the green, bears date 1661; it was considerably enlarged in 1825. Archerfield is the residence of Mrs. Nisbet Hamilton-Ogilvy.

GULLANE is a quoad sacra parish formed from that of Dirleton, from which it is 2 miles west and near the western coast, with a station on the Gullane and Aberlady branch of the North British railway. At one time this was the capital of the parish to which it gave its name; but in 1612 the seat of worship was removed by Act of Parliament to Dirleton. The links in the vicinity are the resort of numbers of rabbits, and are farmed as a warren. The links have now become a favourite resort with golf players, and the village is attracting summer visitors; in the centre of the village are the ruins of the ancient kirk, dedicated to St. Andrew. A supply of water from a bore and deep well producing 70,000 gallons per day was provided in 1896. Here are Established, United Free and Episcopal churches. On the small island of Fidra, lying off the northern coast, are the remains of a building, which served the purpose of a lazaretto in times of severe plague, and also as a beacon, but a lighthouse has now been erected. A convalescent home in connection with the Edinburgh Royal Hospital for Children, occupies the house and grounds of Muirfield, left by the late Miss M. J. Meikleham. Fenton and Kingston are hamlets in the parish. Mrs. Nisbet Hamilton-Ogilvy, who is lady of the manor, Henry Walter Hope esq. and John George Alexander Baird esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is fertile and produces excellent green crops; there are also some fine pastures. The area comprises 9,209 acres; rateable value, £29,162; the population of the civil parish in 1901 was 1,810, and in 1911, 2,062, including 4 on Fidra island, and 1,136 in the ecclesiastical parish. The population of Gullane in 1911 was 926.

DREM, see ATHELSTANEFORD.

DUNBAR (which includes Belhaven) is a seaport town, royal and police burgh, on the coast of the North Sea, with a station on the North British railway, 11 miles north-east from Haddington and 29 east from Edinburgh; it is the seat of a presbytery in the synod of Lothian, and is also a civil and ecclesiastical parish in the East Lothian poor combination, bounded south and east by Stenton and Spott, and west by Whitekirk. The town, which occupies a slightly elevated site, is considered a very healthy resort for invalids, and the principal street is a spacious thoroughfare. The Gas Works belong to the Corporation, and since 1896 a supply of good water has been obtained, from springs in the Lammermoor hills, at a cost of £3,000; in 1897 filtering works were begun on a site about 1 mile south of the town, and completed in 1899, the total cost being estimated at about £3,000. Dunbar was elevated to the rank of a royal burgh by David II. and its burghal privileges were confirmed and extended by James IV. and James VI. It was governed by a provost and three bailies, a treasurer, town clerk and chamberlain, with fifteen members of council. A modern Act of Parliament has limited the number of corporate officers to a provost, three bailies, a treasurer and seven councillors. The Castle covered a considerable extent of ground, but the date of its erection cannot be ascertained. Being the key to Scotland on the east border, it came to be regarded as a fortress of strategic importance, and was therefore often besieged. In 1296 it was taken by Edward I. and being held for the English in 1314 by Patrick, 10th Earl of Dunbar, Edward II. sought refuge in it after the battle of Bannockburn, quitting it by sea for Berwick. Its most memorable siege was in January, 1337-8, when the Countess of Dunbar, "Black Agnes," defended it for nineteen weeks against an English army under William (de Montacute), Earl of Salisbury. In Queen Mary's reign it was in possession of James (Hepburn), Earl of Bothwell, and when the Queen became his prisoner, near Linlithgow, in 1567, he took her to this fortress, and the associated lords accepting the surrender of Mary at Carberry Hill, 15th June of the same year, it was on condition that Bothwell left her and retired to Dunbar. The castle was subsequently demolished by order of the Scottish Parliament, and nothing but fragments are now visible, some portion having been destroyed during the progress of the excavations for Victoria Harbour. The old battery is now used as a casual sick ward. At Doonhill, near the town, was fought (3 Sept. 1650) the battle of Dunbar, when the Parliamentary forces, under Cromwell, Monk and Lambert, defeated the Scots, under Gen. David Leslie, who had incautiously deserted their strong position and descended to the lower ground. The parish church, in High street, erected on the site of the old kirk in 1819-21, at a cost of £8,000, is an edifice of dark red stone in the Perpendicular style, and has a square tower with pinnacles; in the church is a beautiful marble monument to Sir George Home, Earl of Dunbar K.G. and lord high treasurer of Scotland in the reign of James VI. who died at Whitehall, 29 Jan. 1611, and was here buried. In 1898 a semi-octagonal apse was added, the roof repaired and the interior thoroughly renovated at a cost of £4,500: there are 1,800 sittings. There are also two United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. Anne, built in 1876, and restored in 1892, affords 250 sittings; the incumbency has been held since 1905 by the Rev. R. D. Bruce M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford.

The Harbour here was formed by Oliver Cromwell, and a portion of it now constitutes the east pier of the present harbour, which, in 1820, was improved by the addition of a dry and graving dock, afterwards filled up and large stores erected upon the site. In 1842 the Victoria Harbour was constructed at the joint expense of the town and Fishery Board; twenty years later it was greatly extended and now occupies a space of about five acres, and is frequented by vessels and boats for fishing purposes. There is good crab fishing, lobsters are caught to some extent, and the produce is mostly dispatched to London. The chief exports are corn, fish and potatoes, and the imports coal and timber. The industries of Dunbar are now diminishing quantity. There are several good hotels. A lighthouse was constructed in 1899 at East Barns. In High street are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Bank of Scotland, and in Delisle street is a branch of the British Linen Bank. Dunbar House, formerly the mansion of the Earl of Lauderdale, stands at the northern end of the main street; its grand front, facing the sea, consists of a semi-circular centre and two extensive wings. St. Catherine's Hall, at the south end, was opened Jan. 5th, 1872, and contains a spacious room, available for balls and concerts, and three large rooms, used by the Free Gardeners and Templars. The Burgh school, erected in 1878, consists of two wings, with a house for the master in the centre. In 1897 the Burgh and Lamer Street schools were amalgamated, and in 1904 a higher grade department was added, which is now recognised as a centre for the training of teachers. The market is held on Tuesday, and there is an annual fair on the first Tuesday in February. The soil is rich and dry, and produces crops as early as any in Scotland. The Duke of Roxburghe K.T., M.V.O. and Vice-Admiral Sir George John Scott Warrender bart. K.C.B., K.C.V.O. are the principal landowners. The parish of Dunbar extends about 8 miles along the coast, and the area comprises 7,486 acres; rateable value, landward, £20,021; area of burgh, 584 acres; rateable value £24,185; the population of the parish in 1911 was 4,830, which included 3,346 in the burgh and 1,071 in the Belhaven portion, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 3,759

BELHAVEN is a village, included within the jurisdiction of the burgh of Dunbar, situated about a mile west from that town, at the head of a small bay, which in former times formed a good harbour. It gives the title of baron to a branch of the family of Hamilton, also barons Stenton. At a short distance are the remains of an ancient British cemetery. In the village which is a quoad sacra parish erected from that of Dunbar, is a church in connection with the Church of Scotland, and also an Isolation Hospital, opened in 1901 and containing 22 beds. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 1,071.

EAST BARNS is a village in Dunbar parish, about 3 miles south-east from the town, and a little to the right of the road leading thence to Berwick. In this village is a school for the eastern district of the parish.

WEST BARNS, another part of the royalty of Dunbar, is about half a mile from Belhaven. In this village there is a manufactory for agricultural implements, and extensive maltings. A Public Hall was opened in 1901, and here also is the landward school of Dunbar.

Here are Established and United Free churches. Within the parish are fine arable lands and also sheep walks; and the district contains a number of remains of antiquity. GLADSMUIR is a parish, in Inveresk poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; it is bounded on the north-west by the south shore of the Firth of Forth, on the west by the parish of Tranent, on the south by Pencaitland and Salton, on the east by Haddington and on the north by Aberlady. The village of Gladsmuir is 4 miles west from Haddington, 3½ east from Tranent and 2 east from Macmerry terminal station on the North British railway. The parish church stands on the main road between Haddington and Tranent. George Heriot, the founder of the hospital at Edinburgh, is said to have been a native of this parish, and William Robertson D.D. author of a "History of Scotland," was minister here from 1743, but afterwards removed to Edinburgh, and d. 11 June, 1793. From the proximity of the hamlet of Gladsmuir to the scene of the battle of Prestonpans, that conflict was called by the Jacobite party "the battle of Gladsmuir."

LONGNIDDRY is a village, near the shore of the Firth of Forth, and has a junction station on the Dunbar and Berwick lane. Macmerry, also a village, is on the western border of the parish; here is the terminus of the Ormiston branch of the North British railway.

PENSTON, a decayed colliery village, is 1 mile south-west of Gladsmuir, and 1 east from Macmerry railway station.

MACMERRY is a village in Gladsmuir parish.

SAMUELSON, on the left bank of the river Tyne, is also a village in the parish, 3½ miles south-west from Haddington.

The Earl of Wemyss and March D.L. and Lord Lamington G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,034 acres; rateable value, £14,981; the population in 1911 was 1,433.

HADDINGTON,

WITH NUNGATE.

HADDINGTON, the county town of East Lothian, is a royal and police burgh, the seat of a presbytery, in the synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and a parish in Inveresk poor combination, 17 miles east from Edinburgh, 38 north-west from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 11 west-by-south from Dunbar and 10 south from North Berwick, and has a terminal station of a branch line from Longniddry on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway; it is on the west bank of the river Tyne, which is here crossed by three bridges, giving access to the suburb of Nungate. The streets are spacious and are lighted with gas by a company formed in 1835. In 1893 the Longyester water supply to the burgh of Haddington was introduced at a total cost of over £6,000. The corporation of the burgh consists of a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and twelve councillors. The magistrates hold a court every Monday. A sheriff and commissary court sits every alternate Thursday, during the sessions; one for small debts every alternate Thursday, and a justice of peace court the second Tuesday of each month; a court of quarter sessions is held on the first Tuesday in March, third Tuesday in April, May and first Tuesday in August, and on the last Tuesday of October; and an adjourned quarter sessions on the second Thursday in January.

The Town Building, in the High street, has a tower with spire 170 feet in height, added in 1831, at a cost of about £1,500: the buildings comprise the burgh council room, and an assembly room. The County buildings at the west end of the town, erected at a cost of £5,470, contain sheriff and justice of the peace court rooms, with offices and jury and witness rooms.

The Post Office, in Court street, was erected in 1908 at a cost of £5,000.

Haddington is unquestionably of very ancient origin; for in a charter granted by Ada, the widow of Prince Henry (and mother of Malcolm IV. and William the Lion), dated 1178, she styled it "Meum Burgum de Haddington. The suburb called Nungate is approached across the Tyne by three bridges: the Waterloo bridge, of one arch, built in 1817; another bridge, ancient and narrow, of three small arches, and also by the Victoria bridge, built in 1900: this suburb derives its name from a nunnery, which stood about a quarter of a mile from the town, and in which a parliament was convened on the 7th of July, 1548, during the siege of Haddington, when consent was given to the marriage of the unfortunate Mary to the Dauphin of France, and to her being educated at that court. The street from the West Port to the Town House, now called Court street, was of old named "King street," no doubt from the King's palace being situated therein. It was here that Alexander II. first saw the light, having been born in the palace on the 24th of August, 1198. At the east end of Nungate stands the roofless ruin of St. Martin's church, which has been but little used since the Reformation. The town has suffered severely at different periods by conflagrations and inundations. In 1216 it was burnt by King John, and in 1244 it shared the same fate by accident. In 1358 whole villages were swept away by the overflow of the Tyne, the waters of which approached the monastery, but did no damage. The 4th October, 1775, is memorable for the rising of the Tyne to a height of eight feet nine inches, at which it continued for several hours, and a plate recording this occurrence is placed at the east corner of High street. John Knox, the reformer, born at Gifford, in 1505, received part of his education in this town. The trade of Haddington consists principally in agriculture produce; and it is also considered one of the leading grain marts of Scotland. There is a brewery, an iron foundry, a cloth mill, two corn mills, and several maltings. In the town are branches of the British Linen Bank, the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Royal Bank of Scotland.

The parish church, at one time the church of a Franciscan abbey, is supposed to have been erected about the 12th or 13th century. The nave, which is the only portion now used, was repaired in 1811, at a cost of nearly £6,000, and was further repaired in 1892; the eastern portion and the old square tower are in ruins. A pulpit, altar table, lectern and font were presented by the late Miss Aitchison, of Alderston. There are some good stained glass windows. In one corner of the edifice is the burial place of the Maitland family, Earls of Lauderdale, who for many generations possessed Lethington, or "Lennoxlove." The church of St. John, Newtonport, is now used as a parish hall. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1770, and consecrated in 1815, will seat 300 persons. The Rev. Thomas Webster Hutton White M.A. of St. Andrew's University, has been rector since 1910.

In the centre of the town is a monument to George, eighth Marquess of Tweeddale K.T., G.C.B. and Field Marshal, d. 1876, and at West Port is another to Robert Ferguson, of Raith, M.P. erected in 1843. To the west, along the Edinburgh road, stands the village of St. Lawrence House, at which place King James V. built and endowed a leper hospital; a chapel dedicated to St. Lawrence also once existed, but the exact spot has not been identified. The county Lunatic Asylum, opened in 1866, stands a short distance from the town. There is a free library, and law and subscription libraries. Neilson Park, opened in 1910, was presented to the burgh by George Neilson esq.; it comprises about 13 acres. The charities are numerous, and several societies and clubs have been established for various objects. The Knox Institute, erected in 1878, at a cost of £7,000, in memory of John Knox, takes the place of the Burgh School. It is a secondary or higher class school, and provides a first-class classical, scientific, mathematical and English education for children of the district; the buildings include a workshop for teaching woodwork, and the institute is also a centre for training junior students. The Haddington and Salton Agricultural Societies were united in 1819, and now form one of the most flourishing local associations in the kingdom, annually distributing in premiums about £300. The old bowling green, between Elm House and the Nungate bridge, is now used as a playground. The Corn Exchange, in Court street, was opened 29 Sept. 1854. The weekly market is held on Friday; the sale of oats commences at twelve, barley at twenty minutes past twelve, wheat at twenty minutes to one, and beans and peas at one o'clock. A fortnightly auction for the sale of live stock is also held every alternate Monday. A cattle fair is held in October, and the United East Lothian Agricultural Society hold their meetings here for the show of stock implements, seed &c.; for the show of seed corn in February and October, of stock, poultry and implements in July, and roots in December. Two papers are published here weekly, the "Haddingtonshire Advertiser," with which is incorporated the "East Lothian Visitor" (Friday) and "Haddingtonshire Courier" (Friday). Lennoxlove is the property and residence of William Arthur Baird esq.; Stevenson House, of Lady Sinclair; Clerkington, of James Johnstone Ford esq.; Amisfield House is now (1915) unoccupied. The area of the parish comprises 12,254 acres; rateable value, burghal £22,355; landward £18,874; the population (1911), 5,424 and in the burgh 4,140. Included in the total population were 149 inmates and 32 officials and their families in the District Asylum and 102 girls and 11 officials in the Christie Female Industrial Homes.

INNERWICK is a parish and village, in East Lothian poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Dunbar; the parish is bounded by Oldhamstocks on the east, Spott and Dunbar on the west, the sea on the north, and Cranshaws and Longformacus (in Berwickshire) on the south; it measures 10 miles in length, by a breadth varying from 2 to 3. The village has a station, about a mile north-east, on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway, and is 30 miles east from Edinburgh, 14 east from Haddington, and 4 south from Dunbar, lying rather more than a mile to the west of the road leading from the latter town to Berwick. The Established church was built in 1784. In 1870 the interior of the church was thoroughly renovated. There is also a United Free church in the village. Thurston, about a mile west of the village, is the residence of James William Hunter esq. and about three-quarters of a mile to the south-east of Innerwick are the remains of a castle of that name standing on the summit of a rocky eminence, overhanging a woody glen, which divides the castle from the fortlet of Thornton. The castle, which originally belonged to the Hamiltons of Innerwick, was besieged, taken and destroyed, after an obstinate resistance, by the troops under the Duke of Somerset. The remains of several military encampments can be traced in the neighbourhood. A life-boat station was erected at SKATERAW in 1907. The Marquess of Tweeddale, The Right Hon. Arthur James Balfour P.C., M.P. Mrs. Nisbet-Hamilton-Ogilvy, James William Hunter esq. and Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 13,424 acres; rateable value, £10,773; population in 1911, 676.

MORHAM is a small parish in the centre of the county, about 4 miles south-east from Haddington station on the North British line, and in the Haddington small debt court district; it figured largely in the time of Queen Mary, whose third husband, James, Earl of Bothwell, was proprietor of Mainshill. At that time there was a comparatively large village, which has, however, long ago disappeared, and the parish is now wholly agricultural. The parish church is a plain edifice of stone. Here also is a home for orphan boys, controlled by the Church of Scotland. The area comprises 2,086 acres; rateable value, £2,502; the population in 1911 was 199.

OLDHAMSTOCKS is a village, at the extreme east of the county, and near the shore of the North Sea, and is between 7 and 8 miles in length, by a breadth of about 2; it is bounded on the north-west, west, and part of the south by Innerwick, and by Cockburnspath on the east, and is in East Lothian poor combination, and small debt court district of Dunbar; the village stands in a valley on the road from Dunbar to Duns, 3 miles south-east from Innerwick and about 3 south-west from Cockburnspath station on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway. There is an Established church. Dunglass, a modern mansion near the coast, and the property and residence of Major Sir John Richard Hall bart. is built on the site of Dunglass Castle, a fortress noticed in Scottish history: it was originally one of the many strongholds of the Earls of Home, and still confers the title of baron on that family. In 1640 the Earl of Haddington, and several others who had joined the Covenanters, took possession of the castle for the purpose of watching the garrison at Berwick. While here the Earl received a letter from General Leslie, and was standing in the court yard reading it to the company there assembled, when the powder magazine blew up, which, throwing down one of the side walls, overwhelmed his lordship, together with his auditors, who all perished in the ruins. The deed is said to have been perpetrated by one of the earl's faithless attendants, who ignited a barrel of gunpowder. The land is fertile on the sea coast, and rises gradually towards the Lammermoor Hills, which are chiefly pastural. The area comprises 7,397 acres; rateable value, £4,904; the population in 1911 was 404 civil and 450 ecclesiastical parish, of whom 46 were in Berwickshire.

PENCAITLAND is a parish and village near the western border of the county and is in Inveresk poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington, with a station (opened in 1901) on a branch line from Ormiston of the North British railway. The village is 2 miles east from Ormiston and 2½ north-west from East Saltoun, on the banks of the Tyne water, which runs in an easterly direction through the centre of the parish and is here crossed by a stone bridge. The district forms the easternmost limit of the great coal range of the Lothians; limestone and freestone also abound. The parish church is on the eastern side of the river. There is also a United Free church and the Trevelyan Temperance Memorial Hall. About half a mile north-west of the village is Winton Castle, an extensive and partly ancient mansion, formerly the residence of the Earls of Winton, previous to the attainder of the Seaton family in 1715; it is now the property and residence of Mrs. Nisbet-Hamilton-Ogilvy. Fountain Hall, the property of Sir Thomas North Dick Lauder bart. is a mansion erected about the 17th century, but now partly in a state of decay and occupied as farm premises. Tyneholm, the seat of James Reid esq. J.P. is also in this parish. Mrs. Nisbet-Hamilton-Ogilvy is the principal landowner. The area comprises 5,076 acres; rateable value, £12,830; the population in 1911 was 1,273.

PRESTONPANS is a market town, burgh of barony, and police burgh and parish in Inveresk poor house combination and the small debt court district of Tranent, 9 miles east from Edinburgh, 14 south-west from North Berwick, 9½ west-north-west from Haddington and 3 east from Musselburgh; situated on the shore of the Firth of Forth, having a station on the Edinburgh and Dunbar section of the North British railway. The town consists principally of one long street running parallel with the Forth, and is much frequented during the bathing season by visitors from Edinburgh and different parts of the country. The harbour, situated a little to the westward of the town, and called Morrisons Haven, has a quay for shipping coal and the manufactures of the place, which comprise earthenware, fire-bricks, and other articles, made from fire-clay, common bricks, tiles and salt; the latter originated here at an early date, having been made by the monks in 1189. There is also a brewery and some soap works. The mines of coal in the neighbourhood are very rich; a seam is now being worked by the Summerlee Iron Co. Ltd. within 200 yards of the quay, and there is a stratum of fire-clay underlaid by ironstone. Coal is also being worked by the Edinburgh Collieries Limited in a rich seam which runs under the sea. Prestonpans received its charter as a burgh of barony in 1617, in favour of Sir John Hamilton, of Preston, which ancient village (Preston) is included with the eastern part of the town in the charter; a suburb called "Kuittle," or more properly "Cuthill," the western portion, also enjoys a charter, which was granted originally by the abbey of Newbattle; this division is possessed by Sir G. Grant-Suttie bart. who is also patron of the parish. In the main street is a monument to Thomas Alexander C.B. late director general of the medical department of the British army. There are Established, United Free and Episcopal churches. The Public Library was erected in 1905 at a cost of £1,500, the gift of Andrew Carnegie esq. Schaw's Hospital, at Preston village, is an extensive building erected in 1831 in the Old English style, at an expense of nearly £3,000, out of funds bequeathed by Dr. Schaw, in 1781. The institution was first opened in 1784, in Preston House, which stood behind the present erection; it was founded for the education and maintenance of 21 boys, children of indigent parents, those of the name of Schaw, M'Neil, Cunningham and Stewart having a preference of entry. This trust has been modified at the instance of the Endowed Schools Commissioners; the money is now spent in bursaries open to the public school children, in Haddingtonshire. The house is now occupied by Miss Mary Murray's Institution—an establishment for educating and training girls for domestic service. About 1½ miles to the eastward lies a hamlet called Meadow Mill, the site of the battle commonly known as Prestonpans, fought 21 Sept. 1745, between Prince Charles Edward and Gen. John Cope and the English troops, which had been collected to oppose the Pretender's advance south; the Highland army, marching from Duddingston, bivouacked at Tranent on the night of the 20th

September, 1745, and in the early morning of the 21st were conducted in a mist by a path from Tranent to Cockenzie, which avoided the morass and enabled them to surprise the English, whose cavalry fled from either flank, leaving their infantry to be cut up by the Highlanders, who drove the survivors in a confused rout to the gates of Berwick, capturing guns, military chest, baggage &c. Col. James Gardiner, whose residence (Bankton House) still stands close to the battfield, was killed on the field and interred in Tranent church, and a monument has been erected to his memory. The principal seats in the neighbourhood are Preston Grange, the residence of Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. and Drummore, the residence of Mrs. Aitchison. Preston Tower, in the vicinity, formerly the seat of the Hamiltons of Preston, is now a ruin. Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. the Schaw bequest, Mrs. Aitchison and James McNeil esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 1,299 acres; rateable value, £24,698 (landward part); area of the burgh, 41 acres; rateable value, £6,812; rateable value of railways £1,500, making a total of £33,010; population in 1901, 3,382, and in 1911, 4,722, including 1,923 in the burgh.

SALTON (or Saltoun) is a parish, in Inveresk poor combination, and small debt court district of Haddington; it lies chiefly in a fertile valley on the north side of the Lammermoor Hills, bounded on the north, west and south by the Tyne and Salton rivers, and on the east by the parishes of Bolton and Haddington, and contains the villages of East and West Salton, with a station (opened in 1901) on a branch line of the North British railway, 1½ miles from East Salton and half a mile from West Salton. The village of East Salton is 15 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 5 south-west from Haddington and about 4 south-east from Winton station on the Macmerry section of the North British railway. The parish church, almost entirely rebuilt in 1805, is a cruciform edifice consisting of chancel, nave, transept and a tower and spire 90 feet high. Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury 1689-1715, had Salton for his first benefice (1665), and for four years performed the duties of parish minister, but in 1669 was appointed professor of Divinity at Glasgow, and in 1673 settled in London, then becoming chaplain to the King, preacher at the Rolls chapel and lecturer of St. Clement's: he bequeathed to Saltoun parish a sum of money, now producing about £5 yearly, for the increase of the library, besides a considerable sum for educating, clothing and apprenticing 30 poor children, and the proceeds of the bequests now amount to about £80 per annum. Andrew Fletcher, political writer, and pupil of Bishop Burnet, was born in this parish in 1653, and was some time a member of the Scottish Parliament; he afterwards took part in the rebellion of the Duke of Monmouth (1685), for which he suffered exile, but returned in 1688 with William III. and was subsequently a bitter opponent of the union of the two kingdoms; he died in 1716. In East Salton is a fountain to the memory of John Fletcher esq. who died in 1903. Salton Hall, a mansion standing in a fine park on the western border of the parish, is the seat of Andrew Mansel Talbot Fletcher esq. who is the principal landowner. The area comprises 3,640 acres; rateable value, £5,133; the population in 1911 was 386.

There are two United Free churches, one erected in 1814, the other in 1845, a Roman Catholic church, opened July 28th, 1892, and a Primitive Methodist chapel, erected in 1870. The Town Hall was built in 1888, at a cost of £1,000, and is used for public entertainments. The Royal Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland have branches here. The park in Bridge street is 13 acres in extent, and was presented to the town by Mrs. Mary Shank Polson, in memory of her husband, the late John Polson esq. Near the southern boundary of the parish is Elphinstone Tower, once a baronial residence; and in other parts of the parish are the ruins of Waterfallside Castle, Seton Castle, and the remains of a once collegiate church. YESTER is a parish in the East Lothian poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington: it is bounded on the east by the parish of Garvald, on the west by Bolton and Humbie, on the north by Haddington, and extends southward to Berwickshire: near the southern extremity is Lammer Law, a peak of the Lammermoor Hills, 1,733 feet above sea-level.

GIFFORD is a village on the Gifford water, with a terminal station on a branch from Ormiston of the North British railway, opened in 1901, and is 20 miles east-south-east from Edinburgh and 9 south-east from Tranent. The village is well built, and consists of two spacious streets of unequal length, one end of the longest having a fine avenue of lofty trees, which extends for a mile in a southerly direction, and terminates at Yester House, the mansion of the Marquess of Tweeddale. This village was the birthplace in 1505 of John Knox, the Reformer who instituted the Protestant worship in Scotland, and in 1556 preached against the existing bishops and clergy; in 1563 he was tried on a charge of high treason, but acquitted, and dying 24 Nov. 1572, was buried in St. Giles', Edinburgh. The parish church here, erected in 1708, stands at the eastern end of the shorter street, and contains a pulpit of oak of much greater antiquity than the building itself, called "Knox's pulpit." There is also a United Free church; the old parochial school is now used for lectures &c.

The Marquess of Tweeddale is the principal landowner. The area comprises 9,028 acres; rateable value, £9,578; the population in 1911 was 747.

THE INNER HEBRIDES

See ARGYLLSHIRE for MULL, JURA, ISLAY & Smaller Islands; and INVERNESS-SHIRE for SKYE, Small Isles, &c.

THE OUTER HEBRIDES

THE Outer or Western Hebrides, so called to distinguish them from the inner range of islands, Islay &c., which lie closer in to the mainland, consist of those islands exposed to the Atlantic, and are outside the Little Minch, extending from north-east, at the Butt of Lewis, to the south-western point of Barra Head, and include the large islands of Lewis (with its southern adjunct of Harris), North and South Uist, Scalpa, Baleshare, Benbecula, Bernera and Barra, and the smaller ones of Mingalay, Scarpa, Sandray, Taransay, the two Pabbays, Boveray, Eriskay, Grimsay, Heikser, Watersay, Hecla and Scarp, besides the Monach and Shiant islands and many still smaller islets. The four northern parishes (or Lewis proper) form part of the County of Ross, the remainder being in Inverness-shire. The entire length of this string of islands, which is sometimes known as Long Island, is about 130 miles, with a breadth varying from 1 mile to 30. The area is 715,993 acres, viz.: 311,580 of the county of Inverness and 404,413 of the County of Ross and Cromarty; the population in 1901 was 46,172, viz.: of the County of Inverness 17,223 and of the County of Ross and Cromarty 28,949, and in 1911, 46,732, viz.: Inverness-shire 17,129 and Ross-shire and Cromarty 29,603. The St. Kilda group is also included in the Outer Hebrides; they lie 60 miles west from Harris. The Hebrides do not appear to have fallen under the Roman yoke, though known to Pliny as the Hebrides, but formed part of the Dalryadan kingdom, and in the latter years of the 9th century the Scoto Picts who occupied them were overrun by the Northmen, who established a viceroy on the Isle of Man, who had jurisdiction over Dublin, Man and the Western Isles, or Sudreys. The defeat of Hakon, at Largs, in 1263, ended the dominion of the Northmen, the Hebrides being finally separated from the Norwegian dominions and added to the Kingdom of Scotland, though the descendants of Somerled, a chief of Cantyre, who had held the lordship of the Isles, but was defeated and slain at Renfrew in 1164, continued to rule them as feudal chiefs, and appear to have acted as independent sovereigns in forming treaties &c. though nominally subject to the Scottish kings, but James V. suppressed the title, and subsequently the property passed to the Campbells; the chieftainship, however, continued to be a subject of dispute, and the Islands were in a very unsettled condition until, in 1748, regular sheriffs were appointed, and all heritable jurisdictions abolished. After the battle of Culloden, Prince Charles Edward fled to Moidart and sailed from Arisaig, landing on the 24th April, 1746, at Rossinish, Isle of Benbecula, and staying on these islands until 28 June, when he left for Isle of Skye. There are tumuli and remains of round forts, also a fine stone circle at Callerish, in the Isle of Lewis, belonging either to the Stone or Bronze age.

Soil, Minerals &c.—The climate is mild, being surrounded by sea water, and the salt particles are inimical to the growth of trees; therefore the islands are destitute of wood, but there is a considerable extent of heath and peat lands and some large tracts of sand. In Harris the hills rise to between 2,000 and 3,000 feet above the sea level, but in other parts of the islands are dwarfed. Large quantities of kelp are collected along the coasts, and fishing is the staple industry. There are a good many sheep and a fine breed of black cattle.

The coasts are much indented by sea lochs, and Stornoway furnishes an excellent harbour. The communication is by steamer from Glasgow.

Fishing is carried on to some extent: the number of boats registered on December 31, 1913, under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port of Stornoway was 530 of 4,219 tons, requiring 2,794 men and boys to work them, and at Castlebay 299 of 1,728 tonnage, requiring 1,040 men and boys to work them. In 1913 2,795 regular fishermen (men and boys) were resident within the limits of Stornoway port and 1,240 persons other than fishermen occasionally employed in sea fishing. In 1914 the value of fish landed in the Stornoway district was £161,822.

These islands contain four parishes—Barra, Harris, North Uist and South Uist—in Inverness-shire, and four parishes—Barvas, Lochs, Stornoway and Uig—in Ross-shire, these latter forming the Island of Lewis. There are 12 ecclesiastical parishes, forming the presbyteries of Uist and Lewis, in the Synod of Glenelg. The parliamentary representation is included within those of Ross-shire and Inverness-shire. There are no royal burghs, and only one large town, Stornoway, which is a police burgh and the seat of a sheriff court.

BARRA is a parish in the south of the Long island, and in Long Island poor combination; it contains the village of Castlebay south of the island and the kirktown, known as Craigston, both on the island of Barra, and besides it includes the isalnds of Vatersay, Sanderay, Pabbay, Mingalay and Berneray. Fishing is carried on to a considerable extent. The total quantity of all fish landed in the Barra district in 1914 was 53,145 cwts. value £27,343; of this quantity, 47,574 cwts. were herrings. The value of the fish cured was £46,796. The number of boats employed for herring fishing in the district in May, 1914, was 173, giving employment to 1,140 fishermen (men and boys). At Castlebay are the ruins of the old stronghold of the MacNeils; there are several small lochs with good trout fishing, and the shores afford fine cliff scenery. The island of Barra is about 10 miles long by 3 wide, and between its northern headland and Pollachar at the south end of Uist is the Sound of Barra, about 6 miles in breadth; at the north end of the island and a little above the landing place is the unenclosed burial ground of Kilbar, which contains three ruinous chapels, varying in length from over 18 to 42 feet; the largest has triangular-headed windows and a doorway of the same form within a semi-circular arch of very thin stones or slates; and the rest flat-topped windows. At BORVE, on the west coast, are traces of St. Michael's chapel, about 31 feet long. Berneray, or Bernera, is a smooth grassy island forming the extreme southern point of the Hebrides, and bordered by wild and lofty precipices; on it is Barra Head lighthouse, 580 feet above the sea. Vatersay was a fishing station, but the curers have left for Castlebay. MINGALAY is a rough hilly island immediately north of Berneray, from which it is separated by a sound, less than a mile broad. On the island is a neglected burial ground, and a kind of kistvaen, called "The Cross," within a circle of loose stones, 42 feet in diameter; there is also a hill, known as Beinichorn, 882 feet in height. The area of the entire parish comprises 22,222 acres; rateable value, £2,646; the population in 1911 was 2,620. Lady Gordon Cathcart, the Congested Districts Board and Messrs. W. L. and M. N. McGillivray are the principal landowners of Barra.

The population of the islands in 1911 was as follows:—Barra, 2,311; Berneray (on which is Barra Head lighthouse), 5; Mingalay, 5; Pabbay, 5; Vatersay, 288.

CASTLEBAY, see BARRA.

ENSAY, see HARRIS.

HARRIS is a parish, forming the south end of Lewis Island, but is treated as a separate island, being in the county of Inverness, whereas the rest of Lewis is in Ross-shire; it extends from north to south for about 20 miles, by a width of about 8 to 15, and is in the Long Island poor combination, and small debt court district of Lochmaddy, and includes the islands of Berneray, Ensay, Killegray, Pabbay, Scalpay, Scarp, Scotasay, St Kilda and Taransay, and other small isles. The kirktown, generally known as Tarbert-Harris, to distinguish it from the other Tarberts, stands on an isthmus between East Loch Tarbert and West Loch Tarbert, which nearly divide the parish in half. Near the southern point of Harris stands the church of the Augustine Priory of Rodel (or Rowdill); it was dedicated to St. Clement, and is a cruciform structure 60 feet 7 in. long and 15 feet wide, with a massive square tower of four storeys, a machicolated embattled parapet, and a low pyramidal spire: in the south wall is a recess, elaborately decorated with 12 pictured panels and containing a remarkable sculptured tomb with the effigy of a warrior in plate armour, and an inscription recording that the church was repaired in 1528 by Alexander Macleod, of Dunvegan (d. 1547): in 1787 it was rebuilt by Capt. Alexander Macleod, after its destruction by fire, and in the 19th century it was restored by the Countess of Dunmore. There are several large lochs; Uisenabal rising to about 2,600 feet above sea level. Five-eighths of the inhabitants of Harris are landless cotters who pay neither rent nor taxes; these reside in what are known as "black huts," and are most industrious in the manufacture of Harris tweeds. Amhuinnsuidh Castle is the residence of Sir Samuel Edward Scott bart. M.P., D.L. who is sole landowner of North Harris, including the village of TARBERT and the islands of SCARP and SCALPA.

Harris is famous for its excellent sea trout and salmon fishing, its numerous bays, lochs and streams being the natural home of such fish. The Hebridean Sporting Association Limited has a lodge both at Rodil and at Finsbay to which large numbers of sportsmen resort. Lord Dunmore V.C., M.V.O. is sole landowner of South Harris.

The area of the parish comprises 123,752 acres; rateable value, £6,148; population in 1911, 5,440 in the civil and 4,944 in the ecclesiastical parish, and of Lewis (Harris) Island, 3,994.

BERNERAY is a quoad sacra parish formed out of that of Harris, and including its churches; the island of Berneray lies in the Sound of Harris, half way between the shore of North Uist and the isle of Pabbay. There are two Established and four United Free churches, one Presbyterian Free church, and sixteen public schools in the parish. Lord Dunmore V.C., M.V.O. is sole landowner. The population in 1911 was 501.

ST. KILDA is the name given to a group of small islands in this parish, lying out in the Atlantic, 60 miles west of Harris; the northern point being a hill called Connacher, rising 1,400 feet from sea level. The little village consists of a narrow street or causeway, lined on one side by a number of cottages, and on the other by barns and fuel or bird houses, all rudely built of stone, and thatched with straw. On the island is one burial place, enclosed by a stone wall: the sites of the churches of St. Brandan and St. Columba, and several holy wells, one of which, called 'Tobarrimbuadh," is a low square massive structure, with a deep recess into which the water rises, and hence flows down into the glen. The "House of the Female Warrior" is a low structure, rudely built of stone, and covered in with turf: within are three recesses in the thickness of the walls, and near the doorway a pillar. Norman Magnus Macleod of Macleod C.M.G. is the landowner; the island of Ensay is the property of the trustees of the late Major William Stewart, and Pabbay in Harris Sound belongs to Donald A. Stewart esq. Population of St. Kilda Island in 1911, 80.

SOA, or Soay, is a small islet near St. Kilda, rising out of the sea to a height of 1,031 feet.

Fairs are held near Tarbert Harris on the Thursday after the first Tuesday in July, and on the last Thursday in October.

The population of the other islands comprised in the parish in 1911 was:—Killegray, 6: Killegray, 3; Pabbay, 4; Scalpay, 589: Scotasay, 20; Taransay, 76; Scarp, 154.

THE ISLAND OF LEWIS

CONSISTS of the parishes of Stornoway, Barvas, Uig and Lochs in the county of Ross and Cromarty, while the fifth parish, Harris (which, though geographically part of Lewis, is considered almost a distinct island), is in the county of Inverness: the portion of the island known as "Lewis" is 40 miles from north to south, by 30 in breadth, and is bounded on the east by the Minch, south by Harris and west and north by the Atlantic Ocean. A large extent of moor or waste land on the island has been drained, and several hundred acres planted with timber trees, whilst immediately surrounding Lewis Castle pleasure grounds and walks have been laid out, and drives formed. The principal eminences in the island are Monach, or Murnag, 800 feet; Ben Barvas, 900 feet; Mealashal, 1,750 feet; Ben Mheadhonach, 1,250, and Ben Mhor, 1,750. The area of the four parishes comprising the island is 428,165 acres; rateable value, £34,816; the population in 1911 was 35,052. The area of Barvas parish is 97,543 acres; the population in 1911 was: civil, 6,953; ecclesiastical, 2,899. The island was acquired by the late Sir James Matheson bart. of Achany, in 1844, from the representatives of the late Earl of Seaforth, for the sum of £190,000. Lt.-Col. Duncan Matheson is the present owner.

Stornoway, Uig and Lochs will be found under separate headings.

BARVAS is a parish in the extreme northern end of Lewis, with a kirktown, 12 miles north-west from Stornoway; it is 20 miles in length, with a breadth of about 8, and is bounded on the north and north-west and north-east by the Atlantic, the south and south-east by the parish of Stornoway and on the south-west by Uig, and is in the small debt court district of Stornoway and Lewis poor combination. Here are Established, Free and United Free churches. The "Thrushel stone," a huge menhir at Upper Shader, in this parish, is said to commemorate a victory gained here by the Morisons over the Macaulays. At Bragar are remains of the church of St. John the Baptist, consisting of chancel and nave, and 32½ feet in length; at Mealabost Borve are remains of St. Bridget's chapel, 34 feet long, and at South Galson more perfect remains of the small chapel of the Holy Cross, about 19 feet long and 12 wide; near the Butt of Lewis, at Eorrapidh, the "Teampull Mor (big temple), 30 by 44 feet, is seen standing in a cornfield: the ancient name was St. Mallonuy or St. Mulvay, but it is usually called at the present day St. Olaf. Recently a portion of this church has been roofed, and the interior of the building otherwise renovated to admit of occasional services (Episcopal) being held. About half a mile to the left of the lighthouse is the "Luchruban" or "Pigmies Isle;" on the isle are the remains of a curious structure, probably the retreat of an anchorite. The Pigmies Isle and its little chapel, (24 feet 9 inches long) are mentioned by Captain Dymes, who visited them in 1630, and by subsequent writers. At Barvas are the remains of St. Mary's church, and at Lower Shader those of St. Peter's church. There is a Druidical circle of stones to the south-east of Loch an Duin at Lower Shader.

CROSS is a quoad sacra parish, formed from this parish, of which it constitutes the northern portion, and contains a group of villages known as Ness, extending along the road from Dell village to Port of Ness. Shawbost constitutes the southern portion and was at one time part of the parish of Lochs. There are Established, Free and United Free churches at Cross, and Established and Free churches at Shawbost. The Butt of Lewis is a singular detached rock off the northern point of the parish, and near it are a lighthouse and coastguard station. The area comprises 85,043 acres; rateable value, £3,033; population in 1911, 3,141.

LOCHBOISDALE, see SOUTH UIST.

LOCHMADDY, see NORTH UIST.

LOCHS is a parish on the east coast of the island, bounded south by Harris, west by Uig, north by Stornoway and east by the Minch; its principal village, Luerbost, on the shore of a loch of the same name, is about 8 miles south of Stornoway; the parish extends for 20 miles from north to south with a breadth of 15 miles, the eastern coast being much broken by lochs, and is in the small debt court district of Stornoway and Lewis poor combination. The area comprises 114,601 acres; rateable value, £3,160; population in 1911, 6,689 in the civil parish and 6,689 in the ecclesiastical parish, which includes Barvas and Uig.

The SHIANT or "Enchanted" islands form part of the parish, but were unmarried in 1911. These islands lie off the south-east coast of Lewis, and are said to be unequalled for their wild and picturesque beauty. Rough Island, the largest, is about 1 mile in length, with a height of over 500 feet, and at its southern extremity lies House Island, which is united to it by a strip of shingly sound, and on part of this are traces of a chapel and a burial ground; the third island is about a mile eastward, and once had a chapel dedicated to the Holy Virgin.

STORNOWAY is a seaport and police burgh and parish in the island of Lewis, county of Ross and Cromarty. The town is 60 miles north from Portree, in the I. of Skye, and 45 from Poolewe, on Loch Ewe in Ross-shire, to which, from Stornoway, there is a submarine telegraph. It is situated in north latitude 58 deg. 12 min. and in west longitude 6 deg. 18 min. 10 sec. at the head of a fine bay, called Loch Stornoway, one of the safest and most commodious harbours in the north, and easy of access to vessels of any burthen at any time of the tide. The north side of the bay and harbour is formed by the peninsula of Eye, which projects into the Minch for about 6 miles, then turns to the north for another 6 and forms a large bay 7 by 5 miles, opening to the north-east. A lighthouse stands on Arnish point, on the south side of the harbour, erected by the Commissioners of Northern Lights, and there is another lighthouse at Tiumpanhead, the extreme point of the Eye peninsula, erected in 1900. The parish, which is bounded east by the Minch, south by Lochs and west by Barvas, extends 17 miles by 8 from north-west to south-west. The town, which is the head of a sheriff court district and of a poor combination, is built round the bay, in form of an amphitheatre. A quay, with slips and landing places, has been constructed, and a sea wall erected round the basin of the harbour. Situated on the quay is the fish mart, built in 1894 by the Pier and Harbour Commission, at a cost of about £1,500.

The white fishery, consisting of cod and ling, has been long and successfully prosecuted in these waters, besides which there are several salmon fishing stations in the district. Ling and cod are caught during the winter and spring months, and are dried and sent to the Glasgow and Liverpool markets. The months of May, June and July form the season for herring fishing, during which it is estimated that close upon 800 boats, with a complement of seven hands to each boat, are employed. The total quantity of white fish landed in 1913 was 606,212 cwts.; value £192,753; exported 86,121 barrels. The total value of all fish cured in 1913 was £247,987. About 90 per cent. of the barrels exported go to Petrograd market. In 1914 the total was 629,765 cwts.; value £158,076. Of this amount 573,960 cwts. was herrings; value, £142,668; exported 36,095 barrels. The total value of fish cured in 1914 was £286,823. Many steamers are employed in carrying the fish to the nearest railway stations at Kyle of Lochalsh and Oban. At Stornoway a large quantity is prepared in a kippered state, and exported principally to the English markets, there being several establishments in full operation. In 1913, 174 sailing and steam vessels of 70,589 tons arrived at the port with cargoes and in ballast and 184 of 76,448 tonnage departed. In the general coasting trade 1,613 vessels of 210,008 tons arrived and 1,582 of 207,866 tonnage departed. In 1913, 530 fishing boats, of a total tonnage of 4,219 were registered at the port of Stornoway, on Dec. 31, 1913, requiring 2,794 men and boys to work them, in addition 1,240 persons, other than regular fishermen were occasionally employed in sea fishing. On Dec. 31, 1913, 15 other vessels, aggregating 504 tons, were also registered there.

A small import trade is done, the total value in 1913 being £17,071, of which £6,408 was fish, train, blubber and sperm oil and £4,601 sawn wood.

The streets of the burgh are well lighted with gas, the works having been erected in 1848. Stornoway was erected into a burgh of barony by James VI. and by Charles I. it was created a royal burgh in 1628, but through the jealousy and opposition of the royal burghs of Scotland, the charter was eventually withdrawn. The General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862, has been adopted by the burgh. A sheriff court sits every Wednesday during the session for ordinary and small debt business, and justice of peace, commissary and criminal courts are held as occasion may require. There are Established churches at Stornoway and Cnoc or Knock in the Eye Peninsula and United Free churches at Stornoway, and at Garrabost, on the peninsula of Eye; there are also three Free churches, a Free Presbyterian church, and a meeting house in Francis street. The Episcopal Mission Church of St. Peter, built in 1838, will seat 120 persons. The Rev. Henry Anderson Meaden, of St. John's College, Oxford and Edinburgh University, has been incumbent since 1909. The Municipal buildings, erected in 1903, at a cost of £12,000, from designs by Mr. John Robertson, architect, of Inverness, stand facing the bay, and include a public library. In the church of Ui (Eye) is a rudely carved effigy of a warrior, life size, on a coffin-shaped slab, and now placed upright on a square base; the figure is habited in bascinet and camail, and a tunic with long sleeves, quilted vertically, and confined by a belt; the right hand holds a spear, the left grasps the handle of a broad straight sword: the effigy has been assigned to Roderick Macleod, of the late 15th century. Here also was buried William (Mackenzie) 5th Earl of Seaforth, who died in 1740. The Lewis Hospital, erected at a cost of about £2,200, is a substantial building of stone from designs by Mr. John Heaton Gall, architect, of Inverness. The Combination Poor House was erected in 1896-7, at a cost of about £10,000, from plans by Mr. James M. Thompson, of Edinburgh. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Bank. The hotels are the Lewis, the Royal, the Imperial and Caledonian. The Masonic Hall, a handsome structure, is used for assemblies, concerts and public meetings. The Nicolson Institution, Matheson road, founded by Alex. M. Nicolson esq. and now under the management of the School Board, was endowed by the late Sir James Matheson with £35 yearly for the teacher and with a site for the building and playgrounds, and has since been enlarged so as to serve as a centre for technical education in the island of Lewis. There are several societies for mutual improvement. Lewis Castle, a fine mansion in the Tudor castellated style, occupies a commanding position west of the town, and was erected by the late Sir James Matheson, at an outlay of £60,000; it is surrounded by tastefully laid out grounds, and is now the seat of Major Duncan Matheson D.L., J.P. On 2nd Sept. 1902, Stornoway was visited by His late Majesty King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra, who were entertained at Lewis Castle by Lt.-Col. Duncan Matheson. In this parish the surface generally is flat and moorland, the shores partly sand and partly rock, and indented by a number of bays. Steamers ply frequently between Glasgow and Stornoway, and a mail steamer daily, via Applecross Sound, Kyle of Loch Alsh and Mallaig, where there is a terminal station on the North British railway. The most remarkable ancient remains in the island of Lewis are the standing stones or Temple of Calernish, for which see Uig. At GRESS, on Broad bay, north-east of the island, is a cave 200 feet in length, and frequented by seals; here also, in an open burial ground by the shore, stands the ancient and fairly perfect church of St. Aula, about 19 feet long and 14 wide: over the doorway is a stone bearing the date 1685, when it was probably repaired. Lt.-Col. Duncan Matheson D.L., J.P. is proprietor of the Island of Lewis. The area comprises 63,160 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £19,235, and of the parish, £24,131. The population of the civil parish in 1911 was 3,438, including 26 inmates and 5 officials in the Lewis Combination Poorhouse, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 8,498. The area of the burgh is 255 acres; population in 1911, 3,806.

TRUMISGARRY, see NORTH UIST.

UIG is a parish in the western part of Lewis Island, with a kirktown near the coast, 34 miles west from Stornoway; it is about 24 miles in length with a breadth of about 18, and is bounded on the north-east by the parish of Barvas, on the east by Stornoway, south-east by Lochs, south by Loch Resort, and on the west and north-west by the Atlantic, and is in the small debt court district of Stornoway and Lewis poor combination; the parish includes the isles of Bernera and Flannen. The famous Callernish stones on the northern shore of Loch Roag, in the parish of Uig, form a circle of 13 monoliths, 43 feet in diameter, and approached from the four points of the compass by avenues of monoliths, one of which is 173 feet in length; the monoliths in the circle vary from 4½ to 12 feet in height, and towards and almost touching the eastern point of the circle a circular cairn was discovered in 1858, containing a cruciform stone-lined chamber divided into two parts, with a passage leading to the outside of the cairn; fragments of burnt human bones and other animal matter were found, clearly showing that the circle was a grave enclosure; the late Sir James Matheson had the ground cleared and the accumulations of soil removed, thus opening up the monoliths, and surrounded the whole with a wire fence. Half a mile to the east is another smaller circle, and other detached specimens of these stones exist in various parts of the island. The sole right of fishing in the River Black Water and its tributaries, and all lochs connected therewith, belongs to the proprietor of the Garynahine Temperance hotel. The parish contains an Established, two United Free churches and a Free church, and 9 public schools. At Mealastadh are some remains of a chapel, about 18 feet long, standing in a burial ground, and near by are traces of a nunnery of Black Sisters. At a little distance from this locality there were discovered upwards of 60 ebony figures, beautifully executed, and from their costume evidently very ancient. Near Gallonhead, in a small hollow, is a ruined chapel, called "Blessing House," about 18 feet long, built of rude masonry, with two doorways, a splayed east window, and a wall niche on either side. At Valtos are traces of another chapel of the same size: at the head of Loch Carloway slight traces remain of St. Michael's chapel, and at Dal Morr are the remains of a chapel, 60 feet in length. The area comprises 129,109 acres; rateable value, £4,348; the population in 1911 was 4,462 in the civil and 3,436 in the ecclesiastical parish.

The population in 1911 of the islands comprising the parish was:—Bernera, 730; Flannen (on which is a lighthouse), 3; Lewis, 3,729.

NORTH UIST is an island and parish about 17 miles long by a width of from 3 to 13 miles, bounded on the east by the Little Minch, on the west by the Atlantic, north by the Sound of Harris, and south by Loch Rueval; the parish is in Long Island poor combination, and includes the smaller isles of Baleshare, Boreray, Grimsay, Heisker, Kirkibost, Leiravay, Oronsay, Ronay, Shellay and Vallay.

LOCHMADDY, the chief village in the parish, is situated on the eastern side of the island, at the head of Loch Maddy, which forms a natural harbour, the entrance being protected by three rocky promontories known as Maddy Mohr, Maddy Beg and Maddy Gruinmuch. Here is an Admiralty signal station. At Kilmuir and Bayhead are Established and United Free churches: at Carinish, on the south-west, an Established Mission and United Free church, and Mission halls at Lochmaddy and Sollas on the north-west. On the island is a Court House, a Combination Poor House, one hotel and two licensed inns. On the Monach Islands, off the south-west coast, is a lighthouse, and at the entrance to Lochmaddy is a revolving flash lighthouse.

Fairs are held in May, on the Friday before Portree; July, Friday after South Uist, and in September on the Friday week before Sligachan. There are waste-burying grounds, half covered with drifted sand, at various places on the north shore, and at Clachan traces of a chapel. On the island of Vallay is an open burying ground, with a fragment of a cross, 5ft. 4in. high, and having four round holes on the head. At HOUGARY, the westernmost point, is the ancient churchyard of Kilmuir, where are some much worn slabs, while inland on the main road is the modern parish church of Kilmuir. At CARINISH, on the south-west, are the remains of the ancient church of the Trinity, consisting of two rectangular structures, one about 62 feet in length and the other 23, connected by a low vaulted passage with a window on each side. The area of the entire parish comprises 75,513 acres; rateable value, £5,194; the population in 1911 was 3,677 in the civil parish, island 2,881, and 2,712 in the ecclesiastical parish. Included in the civil population were 31 inmates in Long Island Combination Poorhouse, of which 27 were in the lunatic wards.

The population in 1911 of the Islands comprising the parish was:—Baleshare, 184; Boreray, 89; Grimsay, 362; Heisker, 81; Leiravay, 25; Oronsay, 7; Ronay, 6; Shillay (on which is a lighthouse), 5; Vallay, 29.

SOUTH UIST is an island and parish 7 miles south of North Uist and about 27 miles long, including the island of Benbecula, by a width of 7 at its widest part bounded on the west by the Atlantic, on the east by the Little Minch, on the north by Benbecula Sound and on the south by the Sound of Barra; the surface in the northern part and on the western side is flat, but the remainder is hilly and mountainous, Hecla Hill rising 1,988 feet, Beinn More 2,035 feet and Stielaval 1,227 feet above sea level. The parish is in Long Island Poor Combination, and includes the isles Benbecula, Eriskay, Flodday, Grimsay and Wiay. Scattered throughout the island are the ruins of several ancient castles; at Calvay Island, Ormiclate and Borve, Benbecula, while more interesting still are many prehistoric lake dwellings. The salmon and sea trout fishing are excellent, and the shootings good, geese being in myriads on the machar lands along the Atlantic shore.

LOCHBOISDALE is a village near the south-eastern extremity of the parish, situated on a loch of the same name, and has a pier. Mail steamers call here six times weekly, and cargo steamers twice weekly. Here is a Marconigraph station.

Fairs are held in July, on the Wednesday after Inverness sheep and wool fair, and in September on the first Wednesday of the month. The area comprises 90,093 acres; rateable value, £6,260; the population in 1911 was 5,383 in the civil parish, island 1,639, and 3,999 in the ecclesiastical parish.

BENBECULA is a quoad sacra parish; the island lies between North and South Uist. Prince Charles Edward, after his retreat from Culloden, landed at Rossinish point in this island, 24 June, 1746, and remained here and in other parts of South Uist until the 28th June, when he left for Skye, under the guidance of Flora Macdonald. At Balivanich, or Nunown, on the north-west of the island, are the remains of a chapel, 56 feet long and 19 wide, with very narrow square-headed windows; near this are traces of another building about 30 feet long, and also, within an enclosed burial ground, a third chapel 25 feet long by 16 wide, with windows similar to the first and fragments of a cross. Population in 1911, 1,384.

The population in 1911 of the other islands in the parish was:—Eriskay, 453; Flodday, 1,305; Grimsay, 36.

INVERNESS-SHIRE

THIS is the largest county in Scotland, though far from having the largest population; it extends from the Moray Firth to Loch Linnhe, at the head of the Firth of Lorn, a distance of nearly 80 miles, and from the borders of Banffshire, about 50 miles west of the North Sea, to the Atlantic Ocean, a distance, including Skye, of about 120 miles, and also includes parts of the Outer Hebrides. The whole surface comprises 2,695,094 acres of land and 89,847 of water; only about one eighteenth part of the land is cultivated, and the moor and heath lands cover 1,426,399 acres. The shire comprehends a variety of districts of local importance—as Badenoch in its south part, Lochaber on the south-west, Moidart on the west, Glenelg on the north-west, Glengany in its central part, and others of less consequence, as Glengary, Glenmorison, Glen-shiel &c. The islands annexed to the county are Skye, Harris, North and South Uist, Benbecula, Barra, Eigg, Muck, Rum and Canna; besides a number of small islands. The Caledonian Canal intersects the county from south-west to north-east, running through the chain of lochs which lie along the Great Glen of Albion. The population in 1901 was 90,104, and in 1911, 87,272, viz.:—Males, 42,440; females, 44,832. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 18,968; uninhabited, 1,047, and building, 110, and in 1911, inhabited, 19,266; uninhabited, 1,508, and building, 91. This county is the first in Scotland in extent, though only ranking the eleventh in population.

Ancient History.—This shire was held by the Picts, and Saint Columba is said to have visited their king. The Romans penetrated thus far and had a camp (Banatia) 8 miles from Inverness; for many years the county was the field of constant encounters between rival clans, the successful chief generally obtaining from the king the keepership of the city castle. Edward I. of England captured this fortress in 1303, but it was retaken by Bruce; from 1508 the Earls of Huntly held Inverness Castle until the year 1562. Montrose fought several battles here, and Cromwell erected (1657) a strong fort in its capital city. Prince Charles Edward landed at Arisaig, in the south-west angle of the county, in 1745, and left the same port next year on his return to France; Culloden having been fought on the north-east border in April of that year.

Surface, Soil, Produce &c.—The greater part of the county is of a mountainous nature, especially on the western side; the most remarkable mountain being Ben Nevis, which rises 4,406 feet above sea level. This eminence stands to the north-east of Fort William, near the shore of an arm of the sea, and from the summit in clear weather a view can be obtained across nearly the whole of the north of Scotland from sea to sea; it is generally enveloped, however, in a mantle of clouds, and consists principally of a fine brown porphyry, and contains red granite of a most beautiful grain; it is said also to possess veins of silver and lead. One of its precipices is nearly 500 feet perpendicular; and in the fissures, even in the warmest weather, snow remains unmelted. Around its southern base flows the Nevis streamlet, through the glen of that name, and at the opening of this valley the Marquess of Montrose achieved the brilliant victory of Inverlochy. On the summit is an Observatory, erected by the Scottish Meteorological Society, and about a hundred yards to the south of this is an hotel, which was opened in July, 1885. The other eminences in the county of considerable height are:—Melfourvonie, 3,600; Scarsough, 3,412; and Craig Padrig, 1,150 feet respectively. Inverness-shire is divided into two almost equal parts, by a valley running from south-west to north-east, called Glenmore-na h' Alabin, or the "Great Glen of Albion"; through the greater part of its length are a connected succession of lakes. On the eastern side of the county agriculture is carried on more successfully than in the interior and on the western coast. Along the whole of the western division the climate is more humid than on the eastern side. On account of these characteristics, the principal employment of the farmer in this district is the breeding of black cattle and sheep, especially the former. The mountains and forests are widely inhabited by the red deer; the alpine and common hare and other species of game are also abundant. The extensive plains which surround the lakes are in general fertile. The military roads in this county, made by the soldiers under General Wade, never fail to excite the astonishment of travellers, and additional roads were formed, and bridges constructed, under the direction of Government, through every district of this extensive shire. On the confines of the county are extensive tracts of natural wood, evidently the remains of large forests; the fir woods of Glenmore and Strathspey are supposed to be more than all the other natural woods of Scotland if summed together. The indigenous trees are oak, fir, birch, ash, mountain-ash, holly, elm, sycamore, hazel, and the Scottish poplar; those planted are chiefly larch, spruce, silver-fir, beech, plane, and fruit trees. Those districts in cultivation, along with those in the course of gradual adaptation to purposes of husbandry, are in the north-east, or Lowland quarter, yielding good crops. In the district in the vicinity of Spey, near Castle Grant, an improved system of cultivation has for many years been introduced. For some years past, great disaffection has existed among the small farmers, or crofters, as they are termed, by reason of inability to subsist on the production of their small holdings, and for their relief the "Crofters Acts, 1886-7-8," have been passed. The exports of the county are cattle, wool and corn; the skins of goats, deer, foxes, hares and rabbits; salmon, herrings, dried and salted fish, and fir timber, with the produce of the labours of the hempen and thread manufactures. The spinning of flax and wool is the home occupation of the females over the whole county.

The only minerals raised in 1913 were:—Gravel and sand, 5,980 tons; igneous rock, 10,571 tons, and sandstone, 643 tons.

The chief crops, as shown from the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1914," are:—Wheat, 129 acres; barley, including bere, 6,452; oats, 29,514; rye, 789; total of corn crops, 36,884 acres; turnips and swedes, 10,005 acres; potatoes, 5,434 acres, cabbage, 57 acres; vetches or tares, beans, mashlum &c. 101 acres; total of green crops, 15,607 acres; rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, for hay, 11,338 acres; pasture (not for hay), 20,713 acres. The area of the county (exclusive of water) is 2,695,094 acres, of which 1,462,399 are mountain and heath land used for grazing; 62,641 permanent grass; 85,020 arable land; 139,669 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1914 comprised 6,418 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 54; unbroken horses, one year and above, 1,353; under one year, 695; cows in milk, 17,709; cows in calf but not in milk, 2,491; heifers, in milk, 1,008; other cattle, two years and above, 5,530; one year and under two, 8,451; under one year, 12,731; total, 47,971; ewes kept for breeding, 241,507; other sheep, one year and above, 98,574; under one year, 181,332; total, 521,413; sows kept for breeding, 302; other pigs, 1,663.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 2,715; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 2,471; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 1,163; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 373; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 174; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 89; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 88; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 146; exceeding 300 acres, 31; total, 7,250.

The number of fishing boats registered at Inverness in 1913 was 469, aggregating a tonnage of 9,111, and requiring 2,710 men and boys to work them, and there were also 409, aggregating 1,497 tons, employing 1,301 hands, registered at Broadford, Isle of Skye. The number of regular fishermen (men and boys) resident within the limits of Inverness port was 2,245, and in addition 124 are occasionally employed, and at Broadford, 423 resident and 516 occasionally employed.

129 other vessels, equal to 4,884 tons, were registered in 1913 as being owned at Inverness.

Rivers and Lakes, Canals and Railways.—The principal river is the Ness, which flows from Loch Ness to the Moray Firth; the next is the Spey, which, though a larger river in its lower parts, is about the same size while running through the shire; the smaller rivers are the Beauly, the Foyers, the Garry, the Coiltrie, the Glass, the Morriston, the Enneric, the Kinnie, with others of still minor note; the whole produce ample supplies of trout and salmon. On the Foyers is a celebrated waterfall, descending in one leap to the depth of 200 feet; a dense mist is continually seen rising from the broken water, and the noise resulting from the fall may be heard at a considerable distance. The Caledonian Canal is composed of a chain of lakes, connected with each other and with the North Sea on one side, and the Atlantic on the other, by artificial watercourses and lochs, and stretches across Inverness-shire, in a south-westerly direction, from Inverness, on the Moray Firth, to Loch Eil; it was constructed at the expense of Government on a survey made in 1803-4, by Messrs. Telford and Jessop, engineers, showing the length of the combined lochs to be 37 miles 41 chains, and the requisite canals to be 21 miles 55 chains; it was finally opened in 1822; the highest level is between Lochs Orch and Lochy, 94 feet above high water at Inverness, and 90 above that at Fort William; the cost was close on £1,000,000, but it is only available for vessels of light draught. The county possesses several other lochs, the largest of which are Laggan, Arkaig, Garry, Treig and Eright and some sea lochs on the west coast, besides that of Beauly, at the end of the Moray Firth. The railways are the Highland line, which runs through the eastern part of the county, by Boat of Garten to Aviemore Junction, where it is joined by a branch running up the bank of the Spey by Kingussie and Dalwhinnie to Blair Athole and Perth; another branch coming in from Nairn enters the county near Fort George, runs to Inverness, where it crosses the canal and leaves at Beauly; another line to Inverness comes from Aviemore Junction, and in the south the West Highland railway enters the county a little south of Loch Treig, and passing by Loch Laggan, Spean Bridge and Roy Bridge, trends south to Fort William and Banavie.

Division, Representation &c.—Inverness-shire comprehends 32 civil parishes and part of one parish, and 42 whole and 8 parts of ecclesiastical parishes. The county is singularly destitute of towns—the only one it possesses being Inverness, which is a royal burgh; it joins with Fortrose (in Ross-shire), Nairn (in the county of that name) and Forres (in Morayshire), in sending one member to Parliament. The police burghs are Fort William and Kingussie. The county of Inverness returns one representative to Parliament. The county parliamentary constituency for 1915 numbered 10,407.

ALVIE is a very mountainous parish and village in the eastern part of the county, intersected at its narrowest part by the river Spey and the Highland railway, the latter having a station at Kincraig in the parish, and one at Aviemore, on its northern border; the extent of the parish from north-west to south is about 23 miles, and its breadth varies from 4 to 8 miles. The principal inhabited portions lie along the rivers Spey and Feshie. The church and manse of Alvie stand on a peninsula, almost surrounded by the Loch of the same name, 10 miles south of Duthil; there is also a United Free church and a Mission hall at Kincraig, 3 miles farther south-by-west. Near the Mission hall stands a granite cross, erected in memory of Piper Peter Stewart and his comrades of the Cameron Highlanders, who fell in the battle of Athara, on the Nile, 8 April, 1898. On the left bank of the Spey stands Kinrara, a residence of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B. and which also gives the title of Earl to the Gordon Lennox family. In a private graveyard close to the Spey, and not far from the house, are interred the remains of Jane, Countess of Gordon, d. 14 April, 1812, and on a rock in the same vale is a monument of granite, 90 feet high, to her husband, Alexander 4th Duke of Gordon, d. 17 June, 1827; this was raised by subscription, amounting to about £1,200, and near by is a cairn, in memory of highlanders who fell at Waterloo. Three miles east of the village of Kingussie is Balavil, the seat of C. J. B. MacPherson esq. D.L., J.P. Near to the house and roadside is a monument to the "bard of Morven;" and half-way between it and the village, a little off the road, is a cave of some interest. Lynwilg Hotel, in this parish, is 2 miles south-west from Aviemore station. Alfred Donald Mackintosh esq. (The Mackintosh) (Lord Lieut.), Sir John Frecheville Ramsden bart. Sir George Macpherson-Grant bart. R. B. Whitehead esq. C. J. B. Macpherson esq. and the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 86,596 acres, rateable value, £12,599; population in 1911, 590 in the civil parish, and 504 in the ecclesiastical parish ARDERSIER is a large village and parish on the Moray Firth, in the north of the county and 11 miles north-east of Inverness, in the poor combination of Nairn and small debt court district of Inverness; the extent of the parish is only 4 miles by 2½, and its boundaries are the parish of Petty on the south, Nairnshire on the east, the Moray Firth on the north and Inverness Firth on the west. The village (formerly known as Campbeltown) is situated on a picturesque bay, at the foot of an eminence called "Cromwell's Mount," on the summit of which are the remains of a fortification. There are Established, United Free and Free churches. In the village is a strong chalybeate spring, much frequented by invalids. The Fort George Railway station is on the Highland line, the station being on a branch from the old Fort George station, now named Gollanfield Junction. At Fort George is the depot of No. 72 Regimental District. There is a ferry below the fort with a small pier. Capt. John Orr-Ewing, the trustees of the Earl of Cawdor, who is a minor, and the Crown are the principal landowners. A fair is held annually on the 12th of August. BEAULY is a large village, in the parish of Kilmorack, at the mouth of the Beauly river, where it debouches into the basin of the same name, which forms the head of Inverness Firth; it has a station on the Highland railway, and is 12 miles direct west from Inverness, on the edge of an extensive plain backed by hills, in the centre of which are the fine falls of Kilmorack. There is a small harbour, to which vessels of 150 tons can come up at high water. The exports chiefly consist of timber, grain and wool; the imports being principally coal and lime. The village is lighted by electricity. Here are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Phipps Institute and Reading Room, erected in 1902-3, was presented to the village by Henry Phipps esq. of Pittsburg, and includes a large hall and recreation room, a free site being given by Lord Lovat; adjoining is a bowling green. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and 3 miles north-east of the town is the Ord distillery. The Cistercian Priory here, founded in 1230 by Sir John Bissett, of Lovat, stands close to the edge of the river; the last prior resigned the lands and buildings to Hugh, Lord Lovat, and little now remains but the church, which is ruinous, and used as a burial-place for the Frasers, Chisholms and Mackenzies, of Gairloch. At BRIDGEND, near the village, is a mineral spring. Fairs for cattle are held on the Muir of Ord from the month of April to November, both inclusive; they occur on the second or third Wednesday and Thursday in each month, but are regulated by the Falkirk trysts. There is good salmon fishing in the Beauly, in the vicinity of the Kilmorack Falls, which are noted for the breadth of water falling over. The population in 1911 was 882.

BOLESKINE with ABERTARFF form a united parish 24 miles in length, and from 10 to 12 in breadth, stretching along from the Pass of Inverfarigaig on the south side of Loch Ness to the east end of Loch Oich, embracing the great glen of Stratherrick, Foyers, the famed Falls of Foyers, and the village of Fort Augustus (which see). The kirktown of Boleskine, on the east bank of the river Foyers, is 20 miles south-west from Inverness. Here is an Established church, and a Roman Catholic church at Croftbeg. There is a pier at Foyers and another at Inverfarigaig, both on Loch Ness, at which David MacBrayne's steamers from Glasgow call twice a week, except from June to October, when there is a daily service. A steamer from Inverness to Fort Augustus also calls daily all the year round. The pass of Inverarigaig is about two miles long, and at some parts is so narrow as to barely permit of the construction of a road. About a mile up the pass is a monument to Dr. Bryce, a noted geologist, who was killed here whilst in pursuit of his studies. The Falls of Foyers are about 3 miles from Inverfarigaig, on the road passing along the shores of Loch Ness, and the Falls of Cullachy and Garry are distant 2 and 8 miles respectively from Fort Augustus. A mile from the lower Falls of Foyers is the General's Hut, named after General Wade, who constructed most of the roads in the Highlands, but now known as the Foyers Hotel. At Foyers are the works of the British Aluminium Co. Limited. White Bridge is a small village in this parish, 12 miles north-east of Fort Augustus. The principal landowners are John Charles Cuninghame esq. D.L., J.P. The British Aluminium Co. Limited, and Lord Lovat C.B., K.C.V.O., D.S.O. The area comprises 110,825 acres; rateable value, £14,938; the population in 1911 was 1,896 in the civil and 1,000 in the ecclesiastical parish CORPACH is a widely-spread but not very populous village, in the parish of Kilmallie, on the north shore of Loch Eil, 3 miles north from Fort William, and is chiefly to be noticed as being the southern commencement of the Caledonian canal, which here enters Loch Eli by four lochs; a little above are eight others, called Neptune's Staircase; these are capable of admitting vessels of 300 tons (not drawing above 12 feet of water), and each loch rises 8 feet. Kilmallie parish church, erected in 1784, is in the village, about half a mile from the end of the canal and near the church stands a pyramidical obelisk, of considerable height, with a large tablet of white marble at its base, to the memory of Colonel John Cameron, slain at the battle of Waterloo, 18 June, 1815, while commanding the 92nd Highlanders. At Corpach are United Free and Free churches. The road through Corpach leads to the district of Arisaig, about 35 miles distant, and to Moidart, Glenfinnon and Loch Shiel. At BORRODALE, in Moidart, Prince Charles Stuart landed on the 25th of July, 1745. He sailed up Loch Shiel on the 18th of August, and on the following day landed and entered Glenfinnon, where he was met by Cameron of Lochiel and Macdonald of Keppoch, with their clansmen. Commemorative of this circumstance, Macdonald of Glenaladale erected a monument at Glenfinnon.

DUTHIL is a village and with Rothiemurchus forms a parish, near the eastern extremity of the county, and the parish extending from Aberdeenshire, its southern boundary, about 20 miles northward to the counties of Elgin and Nairn; the parish of Moy and Dalarossie lies on the west, and Abernethy on the east; a part of the parish of Cromdale was transferred by Boundary Order No. 112, under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, to Duthil parish, which is in Nairn poor combination, and has four stations, viz.:—Aviemore, Carr Bridge, Boat of Garten and Broomhill, on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway; the Great North of Scotland railway also runs to Boat of Garten. The river Dulnan traverses the heart of the parish for nearly 12 miles, and the Spey flows along a considerable portion of the eastern border. The village, near the north bank of the Dulnan, and on the Inverness road, is about two miles east from Carr Bridge railway station.

ROTHIEMURCHUS is a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Duthil: it is situated between the Cairngorm mountain and the river Spey, and is 1 mile south from Aviemore Junction station.

AVIEMORE is a district near the south-western border of the parish, and has a junction station on a branch of the Highland railway to Inverness. Three miles from the station, near the foot of the Cairngorm mountain, is Loch-an-ellan, in the centre of which stands the remains of a castle once belonging to the Wolfe of Badenoch: although roofless, the walls are still practically intact. On a ruined turret in the western corner a pair of eagles have every season built a nest and reared a brood.

BOAT OF GARTEN is a small village on the river Spey, with a station on the Highland railway, which is also the junction for the Craigellachie and Boat of Garten section of the Great North of Scotland railway. Here is a public hall.

CARR BRIDGE, or "Bridge of Carr," is a small village in Duthil parish, and has a station on the main line of the Highland railway, from Perth to Inverness. Two and a half miles west of the parish church is the arch of the old bridge crossing the river Dulnan. Here is a public hall.

The principal landowners in the parish are the trustees of the late Countess Seafield and John Peter Grant esq. D.L., J.P. The area, including Rothiemurchus, comprises 78,684 acres; rateable value, £13,151; the population in 1911 was 1,943. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was Duthil, 1,345 and Rothiemurchus, 243.

FORT AUGUSTUS is a village and quoad sacra parish in the united parish of Boleskine and Abertarff, 30 miles north-east of Fort William, and 33 south-west of Inverness, at the extreme south point of Loch Ness, and has a terminal station on a branch from Spean Bridge, begun in 1899 and completed in 1903, of the West Highland railway; the fort from which it took its name was built in 1729 by General Wade, as the central fort of three constructed along the line of lakes extending from Loch Linnhe to Inverness, Fort William, the southernmost, having been constructed some years before by General Monk: in 1745, Prince Charles Edward's forces took Fort Augustus, but in the succeeding year it was recovered by the Duke of Cumberland, and continued to be a military station until 1867, when it was sold to Lord Lovat, and shortly afterwards a Benedictine monastery was erected on its site: the moat and two of the bastions being left: the monastic buildings, including a cloister, were designed by Pugin, and include a church. There are also Established, Free and United Free churches. The Bathymetric survey of Loch Ness, completed in May 1903, shows it to have a depth of from 300 to 750 feet, the descent on both sides being for the most part very steep, and the central portion flat: at one point a depth of 316 feet was reached at a distance of only 150 feet from the shore, the greatest ascertained depth being in the centre off Lower Lenie, where it is 751 feet from Glen Moriston, to within 2 miles of Abriachan, a stretch of about 14 miles; its general depth exceeds 700 feet and an area of 500 feet in depth extends without a break from within a mile of Fort Augustus to Abriachan, the breadth varying from one-half to one-third of a mile; the bottom of the loch is nearly 700 feet below the level of the sea. The population in 1911 was 791.

FORT GEORGE, see ARDERSIER.

FORT WILLIAM is a town, port and police burgh in the parish of Kilmallie, in the Lorn poor combination, and is the head of a sheriff court; it lies a little south of the entrance to the Caledonian Canal, at the head of Loch Linnhe, 65 miles south-west from Inverness. The fort from which it takes its name, standing at the east end of the town, was originally constructed by Cromwell, in 1655, and rebuilt by William III. in 1690; it stood two sieges in 1715 and 1745, and up to 1854 was garrisoned by a company of a line regiment: after the Crimean war the 71st Highlanders and the Lancashire militia were successively stationed here, but in 1860 the fort was sold by the Government to Mrs. Cameron Campbell, of Menzie: the former barracks were converted into dwelling houses, and the moat into gardens, but the whole has since been converted into a goods station for the West Highland railway. This place has been successively known by the names of Gordonsburgh, Duncansburgh and Maryburgh. The West Highland railway from Helensburgh has a station here. Communication is also maintained with Glasgow and Inverness by the Caledonian and Crinan canals daily during the summer, and twice a week in winter. The chief industry is the distilling of whisky; the famous "Long John's Dew of Ben Nevis" being manufactured here, but the town is also the centre of a large sheep farming district. Fishing is carried on to a small extent, and the town is a place of very considerable resort for the tourist and the traveller in the summer months. A part of the river Lochy, to the north-east of the town, affords good fishing. A substantial stone quay was erected here in 1834 by the Society for Promoting the British Fisheries, and by subscriptions, at an expense of about £1,500. The total value of all fish landed in the Fort William district in 1914 was £80,377; of this amount £59,702 was herrings. A suspension bridge of 250 feet span was erected over the river Lochy by the late Donald Cameron esq. of Lochiel, at a cost of about £2,000, but is now the property of the District Council. The town is lighted by electricity, and there is an abundant supply of excellent water. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank, the Bank of Scotland, and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. Fort William is governed by Police Commissioners. The sheriff substitute holds a court here every Thursday during the session, and a justice of the peace court is held on the third Tuesday in April and the fourth Tuesday in October. St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, erected during the period 1875-84 on the site of the old church built in 1817, is an edifice of red granite, in the Early Gothic style, consisting of chancel, nave and a tower with spire containing 4 bells: all the windows are stained, and include memorial windows to Bishops Low, Ewing and Mackarness, of the diocese of Argyll and the Isles, and to Dr. Pusey, of Oxford: the church affords 250 sittings. The Rev. Donald Maccoilchynie Shaw has been rector since 1915. The Established Church is a building in the Gothic style, with a manse and fine garden adjoining, and there is also a United Free Church with a manse. The Reading Room and Library were presented to the town by Mrs. Cameron Lucy as a memorial to her mother, Mrs. Cameron Campbell, of Menzie. On a rocky elevation known as "the Craigs" is an arch, once forming the entrance to the fort: here also within an enclosure is a fountain erected as a memorial to Daniel Stewart MacLaren esq. some time Procurator Fiscal, and on the summit of a rock stands a monument to Ewen MacLachlan of Lochaber, scholar and poet. In 1847 an obelisk of granite, 30 feet high, was set up by Sir Duncan Cameron bart. to his brother, Capt. Peter Cameron H.E.T.C.S. d. at Blackheath in 1843. In High street is a monument, erected in 1852, to the late William Kennedy esq. M.D.; in the garden of the United Free Church manse is a marble statue of Dr. Chalmers, and on the Parade is a bronze statue of the late Donald Cameron esq. of Lochiel. The Belford Hospital, erected and endowed in 1865, by the late Andrew Belford, of Glenfintaig, for the inhabitants of Lochaber, is a plain but substantial building at the east end of the town, and will hold 30 patients. A Fever Hospital, for 8 patients, connected with this institution, was erected in 1894. The principal hotels are the Palace, Argyll, the North British Station, Caledonian, Highland, Central, Imperial, Ben Nevis, Alexandra, and the West End. Markets are held at different periods throughout the year, and there are weekly auction sales of live stock. Fairs are held on the fourth Wednesday in March, the second Wednesdays in June and November, Tuesday after second Thursday in July, and Tuesday fortnight before Falkirk Tryst in October. Lt.-Col. Donald Walter Cameron, of Lochiel, Sir John M. Stirling-Maxwell bart. D.L. Mrs. Cameron Lucy, Mrs. Ellice, and the trustees of the late Lord Abinger are the principal landowners. The area of the burgh is 148 acres; population in 1911, 2,002.

GLENELG is an extensive parish on the coast, at the western extremity of the mainland, about 20 miles in length from north to south by a breadth of 10 to 15: it is divided into three districts, viz.:—Glenelg, Knoydart and Morar by Loch Hourn and Loch Nevis, and is bounded on the north and north-west by the Sound of Sleat, on the north-east by the county of Ross, east by the parishes of Kilmonivaig and Kilmallie, and south by Arisaig and Moidart, and is in Lord Poor combination, and small debt court districts of Fort William and Inverness. The village is on Glenelg Bay, about 18 miles south-west from Strome Ferry station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway, and about 16 miles by road and 8 by water south-east from Kyle of Lochalsh, the terminal station of the same line. The parish is hilly and mountainous: the most prominent heights are Ben Screel (3,190 feet), The Saddle (3,317 feet), Druim Cosaidh (2,558 feet) and Daorben (3,341 feet). There are Established, Free and Roman Catholic churches. This place gave the title of baron in 1835 to the Rt. Hon. Charles Grant M.P., P.C. but it became extinct on his death, 23 April, 1866.

ARNISDALE is a village in the parish of Glenelg, situated about 13 miles south from the village of that name, on the northern shore of Loch Hourn.

MORAR is a district on the southern border of the parish: it lies between Loch Nevis and Loch Morar. The district has a station on the North British railway and is 39 miles from Fort William.

The principal landowners are Arthur Balvin Bowlby esq. James Evan Bruce Baillie esq. M.V.O., V.D., J.P. Lord Lovat K.T., K.C.V.O., C.B., D.S.O., A.D.C. Robert Birkbeck esq. D.L., J.P. Valentine Fleming M.P. and the trustees of the late Sir Henry Hall Scott kt. The soil is various, some portions fertile, and agriculture and fishing are the chief occupations of the inhabitants. The area of the entire parish comprises 134,774 acres; rateable value, £7,983; population in 1911, 1,670 in the civil and 481 in the ecclesiastical parish.

KNOYDART is a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Glenelg: it lies between Loch Hourn and Loch Nevis, and contains the village of Inverie on Inverie Bay, 10 miles south-east of the Isle of Ornsay. Population in 1911, 1,157. Here is an Established church.

MALLAIG is a quoad sacra parish of Knoydart, situated at the entrance of Loch Nevis, with a terminal station on the North British railway and is 42 miles from Fort William. The principal industry is its fishing, and it is also a calling place for the west coast steamers. There is an Established Mission church and a United Free church. The Bank of Scotland has a branch here.

INVERNESS

INVERNESS, the capital of the Highlands, and of the large county of its name, and the head of a poor combination, is situated on the banks of the river Ness, near to its confluence with the Beauly Firth, and commands the eastern approach to the Great Glen of Scotland (Glen-more-na-h-Albyn). It is a great railway centre of lines from south, and to the east, north and the north-west. The distance by rail from Edinburgh is 155 miles N.N.W., via Fife, and 213 via Stirling; 108½ N. by W. from Aberdeen; 208 N. from Glasgow; 139¼ N.W. from Dundee; 168 S. from Thurso; 144 N.N.W. from Perth; 25 S.W. from Forres; and 37 S.W. from Elgin. We learn from Richard's "Itinerary" (one of the oldest documents extant relative to the affairs of Great Britain, and referring to the period between A.D. 138 and 170) that Inverness was one of the ten cities of Britain enjoying the "Jus Latinitatis;" only two others in Scotland are mentioned—Perth and Dumbarton. After the Romans withdrew, Inverness became the seat of the Pictish monarchy. Here Macbeth, the great Lord of Ross and Moray, had a castle, which Boethius assigns as the scene of Duncan's murder; Buchanan's relation is to the same effect, and Shakespeare's play of "Macbeth" has served to make the place historically famous. It is supposed to have stood a short distance east of the town, upon an eminence called the "Crown," at the north-east corner of which there are still extensive remains. After the fall of Macbeth, Malcolm Canmore destroyed it, and erected a new castle, which was in existence until 1746, when it was blown up during the rebellion. The County Buildings now stand upon its site.

The situation of Inverness is so singularly beautiful as to have compelled a recognition of its claims to that character, and in its great charter "its good and pleasant situation" is there noticed as one of the reasons for its endowment as a royal burgh, for which it is said it received a charter in 1607 from Malcolm Canmore; and there are on record four charters in its favour from King William the Lion, besides various subsequent ones by several of his successors. Its great, or, as it is called, "golden" charter, is that which was granted by James VI. in 1591, and which confirms previous grants. The municipal government is vested in a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and fourteen councillors, in all twenty-one, who have the management of considerable charity funds. The burgh, in conjunction with those of Nairn, Forres, and Fortrose, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament. The environs of Inverness combine picturesque beauty in detail, with magnificence as a whole, uniting the characters of a rich, open, lowland country, with those of the wildest Alpine scenery, while to all is added a series of maritime views; the walks in the neighbourhood are picturesque, especially along the banks of the river to the wooded islands of the Ness, along the sea shore, or by the margin of the canal; other points of interest are the singularly-shaped hill of Tomnahurich, or "hill of the fairies;" the summit of Craig Phadric; Druidical circles in the "Leys;" Clava, a literal "City of Tombs," and Drummossie Moor, where the last of the Stuarts, "Bonnie Prince Charlie," sustained his final defeat. The greater part of the town lies on the eastern part of the Ness—a broad, clear, and equable flowing stream—which is here crossed by a suspension bridge erected at the expense of the Government, and maintained by an annual assessment levied over the northern counties; this structure, costing £26,000, takes the place of the old stone bridge of seven arches, erected in 1685, which, on the 25th of Jan. 1849, was carried away by the overflowing of the river. There are in addition two suspension bridges for foot passengers, the lower of which was opened on the 2nd of May, 1882: the stout wooden traffic bridge, erected in 1807 at the lower part of the town, which had done duty for nearly 100 years, was replaced at the end of the year 1905 by a modern lattice girder bridge 28 feet wide, the entire length being 350 feet, and costing about £7,000.

The principal streets in the business parts of the town are Union street, immediately opposite the railway station, High street, Church street, Academy street, Castle street, Queensgate, and Bridge street, which have fine public buildings and places of business. The Castle of Inverness was built in 1836 upon the site of the old castle erected by Malcolm Canmore, at a cost of £10,000, from the designs of Mr. Burn, architect, of Edinburgh. It contains a court-room, a commodious county hall, and various suitable apartments for judicial business. In the County buildings is a painting, by Raeburn, of the late Charles Grant, of Glenelg, long M.P. for the county; and in a niche of the staircase is a bust, by the late Patrick Park R.S.A. of the late William Fraser-Tytler, of Aldourie, many years sheriff and convener of the county. The sheriff's ordinary court is held there every Thursday and the small debt court every Friday during session time, for the decision of claims for sums not exceeding £20. The County Council buildings adjoin the court house buildings, and are also in the Castellated style. His Majesty's Prison is off Porterfield road.

The Town Hall, which occupies the site of the old structure facing the Exchange, owes its origin to a bequest, in 1873, by Mr. Grant, of £5,000 for the purpose of aiding in its erection, which was accomplished between 1878 and 1882, at a cost of about £15,000: in 1905-6 an extensive addition was made at a cost of about £1,200. The style of architecture is Early Decorated Gothic, with details of a French character, and the building occupies an area of about 700 square yards, with a frontage of 73 feet to High street, and 120 in Castle street. It is mainly of two storeys in height, and has a richly ornamented central gable flanked by round towers, and surmounted by a spirelet: the main staircase is enriched with heraldic stained windows. The large Hall is 66 feet long, 35 feet broad and 33 feet high; the ceiling being panelled and richly decorated with heraldic emblems, and in the centre is an orchestral gallery with musicians' room behind. The hall is lighted by fourteen windows filled with stained glass bearing the arms of the Highland clans, and figures symbolical of Art, Science, Law, Agriculture, Education, Literature, as well as the Arms of the Corporate Trades of the burgh, and the Royal Arms of Scotland. There are also portraits of the late Prince Consort, Duncan Forbes, of Culloden, James Robertson, of Aultnaskiach, Sir Henry C. Macandrew, Alexander Ross LL.D., John Mackenzie, of Eilanach, Alexander Fraser, William Mac-Bean, Arthur D. Ross and other former provosts; a fine copy of Ramsay's original portrait of Flora Macdonald, President Forbes, Hector Mungo, of Foulis, some time M.P. for the burgh, busts of the late Rev. Dr. Macdonald, the late Mr. A. Penrose Hay, some time chamberlain of the burgh, the late Dr. Carruthers, the late Major-Gen. William Macbean V.C. a native of the town, and Mr. William Mackintosh, a former provost. The colours of the now defunct 3rd Battalion Royal Regiment are suspended here. The building was formally opened by H.R.H. the late Duke of Coburg (Duke of Edinburgh) on the 19th Jan. 1882. A fountain, the gift of Dr. George Forbes, occupies the front of the Exchange. The time honoured palladium of the burgh—Clachnacuddin, and the ancient market Cross occupy a position in front of the Town Hall. Sir Walter Scott calls this stone the Charrer Stone of the Burgh. The word is Celtic and means the "stone of the tubs," for it was here the young women used to rest their tubs when coming from the river Ness, and around it the old burghers gathered for their social talk.

The Highland Club House is in High street. The Young Men's Christian Association, at the corner of High street and Castle street, was built at a cost of about £3,500, and consists of library, hall, and class rooms. The Theatre, in Bank street, was erected from designs by Messrs. Matthews and Lawrie, architects, late of Inverness. The Free Library and Museum, in Castle Wynd, completed at a cost of £3,800, to which Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo, contributed a donation of £2,000, was opened on the 14th October, 1881, by Joseph Mitchell esq. of Viewhill. The library contains 12,800 volumes, and is supported by a rate levied under the Libraries Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1887. The Northern Meeting held here annually in Sept. consists of noblemen, proprietors, and gentlemen in seven of the northern counties, associated for the purpose of fostering the games and sports peculiar to the Highlands. This Association has rooms in Church street, and a pavilion and park in Ardross street: The Inverness-shire Farmers' Society, and numerous other institutions, hold their meetings in the town at stated periods.

The Working Men's Club, in Bridge street, erected at the cost of the late Donald M'Dougall esq. contains a reading room, billiard room and lecture hall, and is held in trust by the Town Council. The Northern Infirmary was erected in 1805, on the west bank of the river, between the Ness Islands and the town. The Inverness Forbes Dispensary for the sick poor, in Huntly street, is supported by voluntary contributions. The Northern Counties Institute for the Blind, in Ardconnel street, opened in March, 1881, at a cost of about £2,000, is available for 18 blind persons, who are taught to read and write, and do various descriptions of fancy and other work. The College, situated in Ardross street, on the west side of the town, was erected in 1873, at a cost of over £11,000, from designs by Dr. Alexander Ross, architect, of Inverness. The Royal Academy, in Midmills road, was established in 1792, for the purpose of supplying a higher education: the building, erected in 1804 at a cost of over £10,000, is of red sandstone, in the Elizabethan style. The Farraline Park Institution, or Bell's School, in Margaret street, was established in 1842, by a bequest of the late Dr. Bell LL.D. of Madras, and in 1888 transferred to the School Board. The High Public School, in Kingsmills road, erected at a cost of about £8,000, is also managed by the local School Board.

The High Parish church, in Church street, is an ancient structure, rebuilt at the end of the 15th century, and having a tower and spire: St. Mary's Parish church is in the same street, and the West Parish church in Huntly street. The United Free High church, in Fraser street, is a modern edifice with a spire: North Free church, in Bank street, erected in 1863, is a building of stone, in the Gothic style, designed by Messrs. Ross and McBeth, of Inverness: East United Free church is in Academy street; West United Free church, in Upper Kessock street: the United Free church, in Ness bank: the Wesleyan Methodist chapel, in Inglis street: the Roman Catholic chapel, in Huntly street: St. John's Episcopal chapel, in Southside road, and the Episcopal cathedral, in Ardross street. The county of Inverness is divided between the sees of Moray and Argyll and the Episcopal cathedral of St. Andrew at Inverness has been constituted the head of the united diocese of Moray, Ross and Caithness. The cathedral, finely situated on the west bank of the river Ness, was erected at a cost of over £50,000, the foundation stone being laid 17 Oct. 1866, by the late Dr. Longley, then Archbishop of Canterbury, and the edifice opened for divine service in Sept. 1869: it is built of light red sandstone from Conon quarry, near Dingwall, with dressings of Covesea freestone, in the Early Decorated style, from designs by Dr. Alexander Ross, architect, of Inverness, and consists of apsidal choir, transepts, clerestoried nave, aisles, octagonal chapter house and western towers; the length of the nave is 89 feet and of the choir and apse 60 feet; the width across the nave and aisles is also 60 feet, and the total length, measured externally, 196 feet: the towers, each 100 feet high, are arranged in four stages, with double buttresses at the angles, and the belfry storeys have a triplet of lights in each face: it was originally intended to add spires, but the towers are at present finished with a simple arcaded parapet: in the north tower is a fine peal, provided and hung by subscription, as a memorial to the Most Rev. Robert Eden D.D. Bishop of Moray, Ross and Caithness, 1851-86, and Primus of Scotland: there is a fine western doorway under a lofty triangular head, filled with open tracery and enriched with crocketing: the pinnacled buttresses on either side, as well as those of the tower, are ornamented with canopied niches, and some of these contain statues: the lower stage of the north tower forms a porch and has an elegant arched entrance, and the corresponding stage of the south tower serves as a baptistery, and contains a white marble font in the form of an angel holding a shell; the west end of the nave, between the towers, is enclosed by a stone screen, and above the crossing rises a graceful open lantern with crocketed spirelets. The choir stalls, erected in memory of the late Bishop Kelly, were completed in 1909 at a cost of £1,000, and are of Austrian walnscot oak.

Commerce, Trade &c.—At the town harbour and Thornbush quay, and also at the Caledonian Canal wharves, within a mile of the town, vessels of considerable tonnage may receive or discharge their cargoes, while large ships have excellent anchorage in Kessock roads, just above the confluence of the river with the sea. The exports from this port are chiefly grain, potatoes, wool, timber, salmon &c. The imports comprise timber, barley and oil seed cake. The total value of all imports in 1913 was £167,022, of which £70,584 was timber. The exports amounted in the same year to £2,483. In the foreign trade 55 sailing and steam vessels of 20,341 tons arrived at the port; the number in the general coasting trade during the year 1913 was 2,703 of 378,861 tonnage arrived, and departed 2,081 of 305,835 tons. In the same year 14 vessels of 4,844 tons were registered and 20 fishing boats of 9,111 tonnage were registered as belonging to the port, requiring 2,710 men and boys to work them. In 1913, 2,245 regular fishermen (men and boys) were resident within the limits of the port and 124 persons other than regular fishermen occasionally employed in sea fishing. There is a slipway for repairing vessels at the Thornbush wharf belonging to the Rose Street Foundry and Engineering Co. Limited, and ship and boat building yards, two manufactories for woollen cloths, a brewery, two aërated water manufactories, an iron foundry, and three distilleries. The Canal basin has every facility for carrying on an extensive trade.

There are eight banking companies established in Inverness, and a savings bank. The premises of the Bank of Scotland, erected for the Caledonian Bank in 1845, form a handsome building of freestone on the north side of High street. The following newspapers are published here: The "Inverness Courier," the "Northern Chronicle," the "Highland Times," the "Highland News" on Saturday, and the "Inverness Football Times."

The chief hotels are the Station Hotel, adjoining the railway station; the Royal opposite the railway station; the Caledonian, in Church street; the Waverley Temperance Hotel, in Union street; the Imperial, in Academy street; the Palace, in Ness walk; the Union, in High street and the Queensgate (temperance) Hotel, in Queensgate. Inverness being the centre to which the principal lines of road in the Highlands converge—having the Caledonian canal on the one hand, and the Moray Firth on the other—maintains a rapid, frequent and easy intercourse, both by land and water, with all parts of the kingdom. It is also the head quarters of the Highland Railway, whose large work afford employment to about a thousand artisans, besides numerous officials.

Markets and Fairs.—The Beauly, or Muir of Ord, are the most important cattle fairs, and are held on the Muir of Ord, on the third Thursday of January; on the third Thursday of February; the third Wednesday and Thursday of March; the third Wednesday and Thursday of April; the second Wednesday and Thursday of May; the third Wednesday and Thursday of June; the second Thursday of July, for half bred sheep; and the third Wednesday and Thursday for sheep and cattle; on the Wednesday and Thursday before Falkirk in August; the Wed. & Thurs. before Falkirk in Sept.; the Wednesday and Thursday before Falkirk in October; the Wednesday and Thursday before Edinburgh Hollow fair in November; and the Thursday after the third Wednesday in December. At all the markets, Wednesday is the principal day for the sale of sheep and lambs, and is held exclusively for that purpose; and Thursday for the sale of cattle, horses, sheep, pigs, &c. The Inverness markets are held on Friday following the Muir of Ord markets.

ISLE OF ORNSAY, see SLEAT (ISLE OF SKYE).

KILMALLIE is a parish, originally partly in Argyll, but altered by the Boundary Commission, and consisting of two portions, one on the east of Loch Linnhe, from Fort William south to Ballachulish, and the other westward of the Caledonian canal, from Achnacarry to Loch Quoich, the boundary parishes being Lismore and Appin on the south, Kilmonivaig on the north and Glenelg on the west; both are in the Lorn poor combination, and contain the burgh of Fort William (which see) and the villages of Ballachulish North and Onich. The parish church of Kilmallie is in Corpach village. The West Highland railway connects at Helensburgh with the North British railway.

Ben Nevis, the chief object of attraction in this district is the highest attainable point in the British Isles, being 4,406 feet above the level of the sea, and upon the summit the Scottish Meteorological Society erected an Observatory, opened in November, 1883, at a cost of nearly £6,000, but this is now closed. The ascent to the summit is rendered comparatively easy by a winding path or bridle road from the county road at Achintee, constructed and kept in repair by the directors of the Observatory. A charge of one shilling is made for each person who makes use of this path in ascending the mountain, and three shillings for each person on horseback. Those who wish to use the path are supposed to provide themselves with the necessary road-permits before starting, and to show them to the caretaker of the road. Many tourists ascend Ben Nevis at evening, in order to see the sun rising in the North Sea. Should they be so fortunate as to attain the topmost region when it is fine, and unobscured by clouds or mist, the view will amply compensate for the toil. There are now upon the summit refreshment rooms, with sleeping accommodation, open during the tourist season.

Lt.-Col. Donald Walter Cameron of Lochiel D.L., J.P., Sir John M. Stirling-Maxwell bart. F.S.A., D.L. and Mrs. Cameron Lucy are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 205,640 acres; population in 1911, 3,797, of which 2,002 were in the burgh of Fort William; rateable value, burghal, £12,074; and landward, £15,103. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 907.

BALLACHULISH NORTH is a village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Kilmallie, on the north shore of Loch Leven, about 12 miles south from Fort William. This place has a small Established church and also Free and Episcopalian churches. Alltshellach House is the residence of James B. Chinnery-Haldane esq. Population in 1911 was 481.

BANAVIE is a hamlet in this parish, served by a branch of the West Highland railway running from Fort William to Mallaig, beautifully situated on the Caledonian canal, and steamers going north and south call here twice weekly. The Lochiel Arms hotel here faces Ben Nevis, and is close to the pier.

ONICH is a village in this parish, one mile westward from Ballachulish North, at the entrance of Loch Leven, and contains several handsome residences. A steamer calls twice weekly.

ACHNACARRY is a hamlet on the west shore of Loch Lochy in this parish, and has an Established Mission church. Achnacarry is the residence of Lt.-Col. Donald W. Cameron of Lochiel D.L., J.P.

CORPACH is a hamlet, one mile west from Banavie, at the entrance to the Caledonian canal. It has an Established church and also a United Free church. Population in 1911 was 148.

KILMONIVAIG is an extensive parish in the south-western part of the county, about 45 miles in length and varying in breadth from 5 to 25 miles; it is bounded on the north by the county of Ross and the parish of Glenmoriston and Urquhart, on the north-east by Boleskin and Abertarff, on the east by Laggan, south-east by Argyllshire, south-west by the parish of Kilmallie and east by Glenelg, and is in the Lorn poor combination. The kirktown is on the north bank of the river Spean, 9½ miles north-east from Fort William and close to Spean Bridge station on the West Highland railway, and has Established and Roman Catholic churches. Loch Lochy and Loch Oich form part of the Caledonian canal, which crosses the parish from Inverlochy on the south-west border to Invergarry, at the mouth of Glen Garry, in the north-east. The parish is mountainous, the most prominent heights being Ceanna Mhaim, 2,203 feet, in the north; Ben Tue, 2,956 feet, and Ben Choire, 3,066 feet, below Glen Garry; Creag Meaghaiah, 3,700 feet, in the east; Agnach Beag, 4,060 feet; Stob Ben, 3,237 feet; Benna Lap, 3,066 feet, and Carn Dearg, 3,084, in the north. A mile and a half north-east from Fort William is Inverlochy Castle, rebuilt by order of the Scottish Government in the reign of Edward I. of England, by one of the Cumyn family, and the western tower is still called the Cumyn tower. The castle, as at present existing, comprises four large round towers, 30 feet high, connected by a wall, or screen, 20 feet high and 10 feet thick, the whole forming a quadrangle of large dimensions; the wall is in a fair state of preservation, but the towers are much decayed. Inverlochy House, the property of Helen, Lady Abinger, is now (1915) unoccupied. On the west bank of the river Lochy and east of the canal are the ruins of Tor Castle.

The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Lord Abinger (d. 1892), Sir John M. Stirling-Maxwell bart. F.S.A., the Mackintosh of Mackintosh, and the trustees of the late Edward Ellice esq. M.P. (d. 1880). The area comprises 267,233 acres; rateable value, £29,651; population in 1911, 1,700 civil parish and 1,234 ecclesiastical parish.

GLENGARRY is a quoad sacra parish partly in this parish and partly in Glenelg and Boleskin and Abertarff, and is given under a separate heading.

KINGUSSIE and INSH form a united parish in the south-east of the county, at the head of Strathspey; the first mentioned is a small town and police burgh on the banks of the Spey, 740 feet above sea level, with a station on the Forres and Perth section of the Highland railway, 44 miles south-east by road, but 46½ by rail, from Inverness, and 25 south-west of Grantown. The parish extends 20 miles from north to south by about 3 to 10 in breadth, and covers an area of 184 square miles; some miles to the south-west is Tulloch station, on the West Highland railway. An iron bridge over the Spey, erected by the third or Badenoch District Committee of the County Council, was opened for traffic December, 1894. The Police Act was adopted by the burgh in 1867, and it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. Water is supplied by gravitation. An auction is held here by Messrs. Macdonald, Fraser and Co. Limited, of Perth, in April and August, and two in October. The County Building here is used for the justices of peace courts for the district of Badenoch, and a sheriff small debt court is held in January, May and September. A newspaper called the "Badenoch Record" is published every Saturday. There are three burial grounds in the place, two of which are known to be of great antiquity, the walls of the churches to which they belonged still remaining. On the south bank of the river, opposite the village, stand the ruins of barracks erected by the English Government during the Scottish Rebellion, and burnt down in 1745, after being captured by Prince Charles Edward's forces. Here the clans, dispersed at Culloden, reassembled to the number of about 8,000 under Lord George Gordon. About five miles from Kingussie, on the Perth road, is Invernahavon Moor, celebrated for a hard-fought battle between the clans Macintosh and Cameron, and in which Cluny and the M'Phersons ultimately interfered. James E. B. Baillie esq. M.V.O., V.D., J.P. who is the superior of the Burgh of Kingussie, Sir George Macpherson-Grant bart. Charles J. Brewster Macpherson D.L., J.P. Albert C. Macpherson esq. J.P. and J. D. Fletcher esq. D.L., J.P. are the chief landowners.

NEWTONMORE is a village in this parish, 3 miles south of Kingussie, and has a station on the Highland line. There is an Established Mission church, and a United Free church, erected in 1897, and the Public Hall, erected in 1912. The principal landowner is Charles J. B. Macpherson esq. D.L., J.P. Population in 1911, 644.

DALWHINNIE, 10 miles further south, near the head of Loch Ericht, is partly in this parish and partly in the parish of Laggan, on the heights of the forest of Badenoch, and on the Highland road to Inverness from the south and 56½ miles from Inverness. There is a station here on the Highland line. The principal landowners are William H. Dunlop esq. J.P. and Sir John F. Ramsden bart.

The area of the parish is 114,381 acres; rateable value, landward, £17,671; area of burgh, 405 acres; rateable value, £7,962; the population in 1911 was 2,464, with 1,171 in the burgh. Population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911: Kingussie, 2,199; Insh, 291.

ISLE OF SKYE

THE Isle of Skye is a large island off the north-western coast of the mainland of this county, from which it is separated by Sleat Sound and Kyle Rhea; Loch Alsh, Kyle Akin and the Inner Sound dividing its northern portion from Ross-shire. It comprises the parishes of Bracadale, Duirinish, Kilmuir, Portree, Sleat, Snizort and Strath and the quoad sacra parish and waternish of Stenchol. The village of Portree, on the east side, is the capital, and contains the sheriff's court, while the seven parishes form the poor combination of Skye. Its length from north to south is 45 miles, and its breadth varies from 5 to 20 miles; its shape is very irregular and its coast is deeply indented by sea lochs, the largest being Loch Snizort on the north, running about 8 miles into the land, Loch Eishart on the south-west, about 7 miles and Loch Dunvegan on the west, about 6 miles; the first and last of these lochs divide the northern head of the island into three promontories, Duirinish, Waternish and Trotternish, the latter and eastern being the district which is connected with the wanderings of Prince Charles Edward in 1746, and it also contains the two remarkable groups of mountains known as the Quiraing and the Storr Rock. The principal mountainous district in the island lies between Loch Eishart on the south of Broadford and a line drawn from Portree to Struan Inn, a little east of Loch Bracadale, and including in its south-eastern corner the Cachullin Hills, which rise to 3,260 feet above sea level, and contain the celebrated weird fresh water loch of Coruisk, a sheet of water about 2½ miles long, entirely inclosed by lofty hills. There are many small rivers falling into the different bays and sea lochs (which latter include at least 16 large lochs). At Loch Slappin is the celebrated spar cave. The island was celebrated for its race of pipers, and a sort of college for pipers existed at Borcraig. Round the coast are a number of forts and castles, some of which are now ruinous, but a few are still occupied, and of these the chief are Armadale, Dunvegan, Duntulm, Knock, Castle Moll and Eilean Donan, while near the head of Loch Snizort stands the house of Kingsburgh, on the site of the old house to which Flora Macdonald, by the advice of Lady Margaret Macdonald, guided Prince Charlie when they landed from South Uist. The seven parishes (which include some small neighbouring islands) comprise an area of 428,966 acres, and the island is mostly in the hands of three large proprietors, who between them own about 300,000 acres. In 1901 the population of the seven parishes was 14,561. The island is principally occupied as grazing farms, producing great numbers of sheep and black cattle and some small horses, but a large portion of the land is rented by what are termed crofters, who combine farming and fishing for a livelihood. Formerly great quantities of kelp were produced here; there are also marble quarries. The fisheries off this coast, especially in the sound between Skye and the mainland, are sometimes very productive. The coasts are indented with many fine and secure ports, the principal of which are Portree and Broadford on the east, the Isle of Ornsay on the south, and Dunvegan and Stein on the north. At Broadford a stone pier, 700 feet long, was completed in 1892 by the Fishery Board at a cost of £10,000, and affords good accommodation. There is a steamer pier at Kyle Akin and a ferry to the mainland, and a small harbour and pier at Uig in Loch Snizort. The fairs in Skye are held as follows:—May, Broadford cattle, Thursday after last Tuesday; Portree cattle, last Tuesday; August, Broadford cattle, Thursday after third Tuesday; Portree cattle, third Tuesday; September, Broadford cattle, Thursday after third Tuesday; Portree cattle, third Tuesday.

ARDVASER, see SLEAT.

BRACADALE is a parish, occupying the west side of the centre of this island, bounded west by the Little Minch, south by Loch Scavaig, east by Portree parish and north by Snizort and Duirinish; it is 20 miles in length from north to south by 10 in breadth and includes the islands of Soay and Wiay. Steamers from Oban call at Loch Scavaig with visitors for Loch Coruisk and Airds Cave. This parish is in the small debt court district of Portree and the Skye poor combination; the kirktown lies at the head of Loch Struan, 10 miles north-west from Portree, and has Established and Free churches; in the parish are also the hamlets of Talisker, Drynoch and Carbost, at which latter place there is a distillery, but the principal occupation of the inhabitants is agriculture. At Borlin, on Loch Eynort, is a burial ground, with ruins of two chapels, and at Trien, by the head of Loch Harport, are similar remains. The southern portion of the parish is occupied by the Cuchallin Hills, a group of mountains which rise to a height of 3,260 feet above the sea level, and enclosed in the irregular square formed by the inner sides of these hills, and about a mile from the head of Loch Scavaig, lies a sheet of water about 3 miles in length and half that in breadth, the hills surrounding which come down to the water's edge and show no sign of verdure or life, while an almost perpetual mist hangs over the tops and sweeps over the water, giving the whole a gloomy, deserted look; the surplus waters fall over the edge of the hill into Loch Scavaig. Norman Magnus Macleod esq. C.M.G., D.L., J.P. (the Macleod) is sole proprietor. The area comprises 93,164 acres; rateable value, £4,088; the population in 1911 was 805.

DUIRINISH is a parish, in the north-west angle of this island, bounded south-west, west and north-west by the Little Minch, east by Loch Snizort and south by the parish of Bracadale; it extends 18 miles from north to south and its extreme breadth is 15 miles, but in the northern part it is cut into three headlands by the Lochs Follart (or Dunvegan) and Bay; it is in the poor combination of Skye and small debt court district of Portree. Cattle and sheep markets are held four times a year at Dunvegan on the Friday before the Portree market in May, August and September, and on the Monday before the Portree market in November. The western portion of the parish is known as Duirinish, and has Established and United Free churches, and that to the east of Loch Follart as Waternish, which has also Established and United Free churches, and there is a Free Presbyterian church at Glendale; Duirinish has some singular hills 1,500 feet high called McLeods' Tables and McLeods' Maidens. In the Waternish district there is a ruined church and burying ground, and at Trumpan, north of this, are the remains of a chapel, 51 feet long, with a burial ground, in which stands a roughly wrought pillar or shaft called the "Trying Stone of Trumpan;" here was buried the unfortunate Lady Grange, a Jacobite heroine. Edinbane and Dunvegan are villages in this parish, and near the latter, which is 24 miles north-west from Portree, stands Dunvegan Castle, the seat of the Macleod of Macleod C.M.G., J.P., D.L.; it stands on an elevated mass of rock on the shore of Loch Follart, and is said to date from the 9th century; the fabric was enlarged by Masdair Crotach in the reign of James VI. and contains some antiquities connected with the family. This parish was celebrated for its pipers, and young pipers were sent to study music under them. Kenneth Macleod Robertson-Macleod esq. J.P. the Macleod of Macleod C.M.G. Nicol Martin esq. Lord Napier of Magdala, and Lieut. Allan R. Macdonald are the principal landowners. The area comprises 80,067 acres; rateable value, £5,663; population in 1911, 3,093 in the civil parish and 2,385 in the ecclesiastical parish.

HALIN-IN-WATERNISH is a quoad sacra parish in Duirinish civil parish. Population in 1911, 708.

KILMUIR is a parish, forming the north-eastern point of this island and the northern extremity of the district of Trotternish, and its kirktown is 20 miles north-by-east from Portree, and has Established, United Free and Free churches. The parish, which extends 12 miles from north to south, by a breadth of 4 to 7, is in the poor combination of Skye and the small debt court district of Portree, and is bounded south by the parish of Snizort and on the other three sides by Loch Snizort and the Minch; a chain of hills runs down the centre of the parish, the northern portion, known as the "Quiraing," being remarkable for a collection of singular shaped peaks surrounding a turf platform, at the entrance to which is a tall needle-shaped rock; these hills lie 16 miles north of Portree; and 5 miles to the north-west is Duntulm Castle, the old residence of the Macdonalds, situated on a rock jutting out into the Minch and occupying, it is believed, the site of an old Viking fort. In the churchyard of Kilmuir is the grave of the Jacobite heroine, Flora Macdonald. The Board of Agriculture for Scotland are the sole landowners. The area of the parish comprises 34,251 acres; the population in 1911 was 1,964 in the civil parish and 887 in the ecclesiastical parish.

PORTREE is a village, seaport and parish in the east centre of this island, and the head of a sheriff court and of the poor combination of Skye: it is the capital of the island and lies about 109 miles (via Invermoriston) west from Inverness, and 74 north from Tobermory; it is reached by steamer from Oban, or from Kyle of Lochalsh by railway steamer. The village is seated a little above the shore, at the summit of a somewhat steep acclivity, thickly planted with trees. There are three banking establishments, two good hotels and posting houses, the Portree hotel and the Royal, and a mill, built in 1850, for the manufacture of tweeds, plaids, yarns and carpets. The quay, erected in 1819, has been much improved by Lord Macdonald (who owns this part of the town), at a cost of £3,000, and is available for trading steamers and ships at all states of the tide, which rises from 12 to 16 feet; the bay is safe and spacious, having a depth of from 5 to 12 fathoms, and the anchorage is excellent. The exports are sheep, black cattle, wool, salt herrings, salmon (chiefly for London), and cod and ling, both salt and dry, principally for Glasgow and Liverpool. A sheriff court is held every Thursday during the session. On a high rocky promontory, projecting some distance into the bay, stands an octagonal tower, built in 1834, by Dr. Alexander M'Leod, and affording a splendid view of the surrounding scenery. There are Established, United Free and Free Presbyterian churches. The Episcopal church of St. Columba is a building of stone, in the Early English and Decorated styles, erected in 1884 as a memorial to the late Right Rev. J. G. R. Mackarness, Bishop of Argyll and the Isles, at a cost of about £2,500, and consists of chancel, nave, organ chamber, and a tower at the south-west angle containing one bell, and surmounted by a saddleback roof: there are 150 sittings. The Rev. Henry William Gibson M.A., LL.B. has been rector since 1911: a rectory house was built in 1893, at a cost of £800. The Ross Memorial Cottage Hospital was erected in 1893 at a cost of about £700 in memory of David Ross, surgeon, and a native of Portree, and contains 5 wards with 4 beds in each ward and 2 single wards. In a secluded spot near the harbour is a deserted burial ground, with traces of a chapel. Lord Macdonald and Messrs. Baird and Co. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 56,915 acres; rateable value, £9,064; the population of the parish in 1911 was 2,431, including 14 inmates and 4 officials in Skye Combination Poorhouse.

RAASAY ISLAND is about 13 miles long and 2 to 4 broad, and lies to the east of Skye, opposite Portree, being separated from it by the sound of Raasay, which is about 4 miles wide. There are Free and Free Presbyterian churches. It is the property of Messrs. Baird and Co. A new pier has been built. To the north of a hill, called "Dun Caan," are the ruins of Brochel Castle, and at Clachan, on the southern point of the island, are the remains of the church of St. Moluac, a structure of Early Pointed date, with lancet windows and a square-headed doorway. The area is about 18,000 acres; the population in 1911 was 324.

RONA ISLAND lies off the northern extremity of Raasay, from which it is separated by a strait passable for small vessels. It is about 4 miles in length by 1 in breadth. The little arable ground which occurs in Rona surrounds a scattered village which lies at the bottom of the bay, and contains nearly all the population of the island. Messrs. Baird and Co. are sole proprietors of the island. There is a very fine lighthouse here. The population in 1911 was 133.

FLODDA, or Fladday, is a small island about 1½ miles long, lying off the north-west angle of Raasay. Messrs. Baird and Co. are sole proprietors of the island. The population in 1911 was 45.

TIGH is also an island in Portree parish. Population in 1911, 6.

STRATH is a parish in the south east portion of the island and contains the villages of Broadford, Kyleakin and Torrin, the first of these being 24 miles south-east of Portree, at the head of a small bay, and steamers call here as well as at Kyleakin: the parish is in the poor combination of Skye and small debt court district of Portree, and 16 or 17 miles in length from east to west, by 10 from north to south; it includes Pabbay and Scalpay Islands, and is bounded south by the parish of Sleat and north by Portree, the Inner and Cuchullin sounds forming the boundaries east and west. There are Established, United Free and Free churches, each with attached missions, and a Baptist chapel. A little east of Kyleakin are the ruins of Castle Moil; the kirktown is 7 miles north-west of Broadford, and there is a ferry from here to Loch Alsh, on the mainland. A few miles south-west of Broadford is Kilchrist, where is a burying ground and the remains of a church of some size, a plain cross 5½ feet long and several slabs. In the western part of the parish, on Loch Slapin, is Kilbride, where there are traces of a burial ground and a chapel, a rudely wrought shaft, 8 feet in height, and a well, called St. Annat's; at Ashig, between Broadford and Kyleakin, are similar remains, the well being covered in by a low structure formed of large stones. Lord Macdonald, R. L. Thompson esq. and Lady Currie are the principal landowners. The area comprises 69,765 acres; rateable value, £4,775; the population in 1911 was 1,959, of whom SCALPAY ISLAND had a population of 27 and PABAY ISLAND 5.

BROADFORD contains valuable marble quarries. The number of fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the 'Merchant Shipping Act, 1894,'' as belonging to Broadford on Dec. 31st, 1913, was 109, of 1,907 tons, requiring 1,301 men and boys to work them. In the same year 423 regular fishermen (men and boys) were resident in the district, and 516 persons, other than fishermen, occasionally employed in sea fishing.

THE SMALL ISLES

THESE Isles, forming a parish, consist of the islands of Canna, Eigg, Hyskier, Muck, Rhum and Sandy; of these Eigg only was originally in this county, the other four having been transferred from Argyllshire by Boundary Order No. 91, under "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889;" these five islands lie off the coasts of Moidart and Skye in a curved line extending from north-west to south, and are divided from the large island of Skye by the Cuchullin sound. Rhum and Eigg can only be approached by boat from the western side, the heavy swell from the Atlantic rendering the western coasts inaccessible. The parish church is on Eigg Island, where there is also a Roman Catholic church and a Free Mission church; here also is the post office.

CANNA lies 5 miles to the north-west of Rhum, and is 18 miles in circumference; it contains two open and neglected burial grounds, in one of which is a broken cross about 6 feet in height, and in the other some slabs and a column of red stone, and there are traces of the ancient church of St. Columba; at the east end rises Compass hill, a bold headland with perpendicular cliffs. The island is the property of Allan Gilmour Thom esq. The population in 1911 was 39, including 10 shipping.

EIGG is an island lying 4 miles south-east of Rhum and 7 south-west of the Promontory of Sleat, in the Isle of Skye; the island consists of a mass of trap rock, slightly higher at the northern extremity and sloping to the south, where there is a singular columnar rock of porphyry, about 1½ miles long, running east and west, rising about 470 feet in height and narrowing at the top to 10 feet in width. There is also in this part of the island a cave, 225 feet long, in which in the 16th century the MacDonalds, who then inhabited the island, took refuge when it was invaded by the Laird of Macleod, who by lighting fires at the entrance suffocated the whole 200 to death: on the east side are remains of the ancient church of Kildonan, a rudely built structure, 56 feet in length, and containing a carved slab and an upright stone bearing a cross with squared centre and expanding arms within a circle. The area comprises 7,275 acres, and is wholly the property of the trustees of the late R. L. Thomson esq. Population in 1911, 181.

HYSKIER is a small island on which is a lighthouse. Population in 1911, 3.

MUCK is a small island lying 4 miles south-west from Eigg and 15 miles north from Ardnamurchan point; it is about 3 miles long by 1 in breadth, is more level than the other islands and affords pasture for cattle: the principal occupation of the inhabitants is fishing. There are remains here of a small monastery, planted by St. Columba early in the 7th century. This island is also the property of the trustees of the late R. L. Thomson esq. Population in 1911, 38.

RHUM island, the largest of the group, 8 miles in length and 6 or 7 in breadth, lies about 9 miles west of Sleat point and 15 north of Ardnamurchan point, and is wild and mountainous, the two principal peaks being Haskeval, 2,659 feet above sea level, and Benmore, 2,300 feet; at Kilmory, on the north, is a small burial ground and traces of a chapel, a stone bearing an incised cross, and an upright slab of slate, inscribed to Catherine Henderson, d. 5 May, 1843, and her husband, Walter Cowan; the landing place is in Loch Scresort, on the eastern coast, and the island belongs to Sir George Bullough. The population in 1911 was 94.

SANDY, a small island lying to the south of Canna, close under Compass hill, is the property of Allan Gilmour Thom esq.; the population in 1911 was 41.

The area of the whole islands comprises 37,748 acres; rateable value, £3,214; the population in 1911 was 396.

KINCARDINESHIRE

Occasionally called the Mearns (and improperly Mearn-shire) is a small county on the eastern coast, bounded on the north and north-west by Aberdeenshire, on the east by the North Sea, and the south and south-west by Forfarshire. Its form describes nearly that of a triangle, having its base resting on Forfarshire, with the apex at Girdleness, on the south side of the Bay of Aberdeen, from which to the mouth of the North Esk river is its longest side, being about 30 miles, while its greatest breadth (which is at the base) is 22 miles, narrowing to 1 mile at Girdleness: the north-west boundary line shows a projection occupying the middle third of the distance, and about 7 miles at its widest part. The area of the county comprises 3,812 square miles, 244,482 of land (of which 450 acres was in Aberdeen city) and 1,206 of water. In size Kincardine is the twenty-first of the Scottish counties, and in population the nineteenth: its population in 1901 was 40,923, and in 1911, 41,008 (of which 11,428 was in Aberdeen city); the number of males was 19,760 (Aberdeen city, 5,416) and females, 21,248 (Aberdeen city, 6,012). The number of inhabited houses in 1901 was 8,743, and in 1911, 9,222 (Aberdeen city, 2,299); uninhabited, 689 (Aberdeen city, 80) and building, 21 (Aberdeen city, 7).

Name and Early History.—The shire takes its name from Kincardine, formerly a small town in the parish of Fordoun, and which was the seat of the county courts &c. until the year 1600, when they were removed to Stonehaven. Kincardine, which has dwindled to a mere hamlet, was formerly connected with an ancient seat of royalty called Kincardine Castle, of which only the foundation of the walls can now be traced. The phrase Mearns, before referred to, after strict investigation, is in all probability merely of local meaning; but it is generally said to have been affixed to this part of Scotland from its having become the property of Mernia, a brother of King Kenneth II., another brother called Angus conferring his name upon the neighbouring county of Forfar. In former times the hollow of the Mearns was the only passable access to the North of Scotland, owing to the hills occupying uninterruptedly all the rest of the breadth inland, except at this point, and it was the common passage for armies going to and fro since the earliest periods of history; yet, unless a great battle between Galgacus and Agricola took place here, as some historians aver, this county has not been the theatre of any extraordinary events, nor the scene of any great military achievements. The peasantry of the shire have always been considered a very able and industrious race of men: and the "men of the Mearns" is a proverbial expression of old date, implying trustworthiness and integrity.

Soil, Surface, Produce &c.—The county is almost exclusively of an agricultural character, for although it has the advantage of so extensive a range of sea coast, it possesses no harbour of any commercial importance. The soil of Kincardine is of a very productive kind, and is cultivated in a style nowhere surpassed in Scotland. The crops raised are oats, barley and turnips, and small fields of rye are to be met with. Attention is also devoted to the feeding of cattle, and on the hills numbers of black-faced sheep are reared. The chief crops, as shewn by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1914," are: Oats, 26,735 acres; barley, including bere, 11,983; wheat, 1,044; beans (to be harvested as corn), 36; rye, 62; peas, 25; total of all corn crops, 39,885 acres; turnips and swedes, 16,102 acres; potatoes, 4,329; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. for fodder, 429; total of green crops, 20,860 acres; other crops, 97; rye grass and other rotation grasses and clover (for hay), 13,759; pasture (not for hay), 33,544; bare fallow, 53. The total area of land is 244,482 acres, of which 42,278 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing); 10,900 permanent grass; 108,206 arable land, and 25,275 of woods and plantations. The live stock in 1914 included 3,654 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, one year and above, 741; under one year, 270; cows in milk, 5,695; cows in calf but not in milk, 385; heifers in calf, 343; other cattle, two years and above, 6,876; one year and under two, 6,574; under one year, 5,354; ewes kept for breeding, 18,533; other sheep, one year and above, 9,033; under one year, 21,729; sows kept for breeding, 394; other pigs, 1,973.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 157; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 345; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 153; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 143; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 187; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 145; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 190; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 79; above 300 acres, 38; total, 1,565.

The salmon fisheries yield a valuable rental, the fish being packed in ice and sent to the southern markets. The white or sea fishing employs many of the inhabitants, the species caught comprising whiting, cod, ling, halibut, turbot, soles &c. Herring fishing is prosecuted during July and August, and is a source of much profit, many persons being employed in the curing of the fish. There are no fishing boats registered in the county, but those used would come under the head of Aberdeen or Montrose. Manufactures as yet have not made much progress in this county, the principal being the making of woollens, flax and tow spinning, and net rope and twine manufacturing. There are also one or two tanneries, breweries and distilleries. The county is destitute of coal, marl and limestone, all of which deficiencies bear hard upon agricultural improvement; these drawbacks, however, seem to have excited more strongly the spirit of enterprise amongst the agriculturists, who import lime in great quantities from other districts by means of the Firth of Forth. In Arbuthnot parish, and near St. Cyrus on the sea shore, beautiful bepples and jaspers are found. The only minerals raised in 1913 were gravel and sand, 1,398 tons; igneous rock, 34,697 tons, and sandstone, 2,857 tons.

The coast is partly flat and partly rocky, and at the north-eastern corner of the county terminates the chain of the Grampians, where they form what is called the Girdleness, which presents to the sea a bold face of rock from 60 to 80 feet high. The chief mountains and eminences are Mount Battoch, 3,465 feet in height; Clacknabane, 2,370; Clairniemount, 2,000; Kerloch, 1,890; the Hill of Fare from 1,500 to 1,700; Scolty Hill, 1,500; and Strathfanella, a detached Grampian, from 1,200 to 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. The county in its more level parts is highly embellished by the country seats of its numerous resident proprietors, each amid its own thriving woodland.

Rivers and Railways.—In the south portion of the county the Luther water and other smaller streams fed from the Grampians empty themselves into the North Esk, which debouches into the bay south of St. Cyrus; next come the Bervie, which has almost the nature of a loch and reaches the sea at Bervie town; then the Cowie just north of Stonehaven, and the Carron issues at the same town; the Dee flows through the north-west corner of the county, and along the north boundary to Girdleness; the Dye water flows north to the Feugh at Strachan, and thus joins the Dee, and the Aven skirts the south-west border. There are no large lochs. The railways are two in number, both converging at Aberdeen, and passing through the county from south to north, and from west to north. The first is the Caledonian railway, which, entering the county at Marykirk, runs north-east to Stonehaven, and thence along the coast to the Dee, opposite Aberdeen. The second is the Deeside railway, which, leaving Aberdeen, skirts the north border and passes through the north-west corner, by Banchory on to Ballater.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Kincardineshire comprises 20 civil parishes, and 20 complete and parts of four ecclesiastical parishes; it contains within its limits a royal burgh—Bervie, and three police burghs—Banchory, Laurencekirk and Stonehaven. Bervie, in conjunction with Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin and Forfar, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament, and the county one member. The county parliamentary constituency for 1913 is 7,109.

ARBUTHNOTT is a parish and village in Kincardineshire poor combination, the parish being nearly 5 miles in length; the village is 3 miles north-west of Bervie station, which is the terminus of a branch from Montrose of the North British railway, and is bounded on the west by Fordoun, or the great hollow of the Mearns, the streams of Bervie and Forthy forming the line of division, and on the north-west by Glenbervie and Kinneff. The present church of the Establishment was founded as early as the 13th century, and consecrated on the 3rd day of August, 1242, by Bishop de Bernham; the portion now in use comprises the nave and chancel of the old church: the chancel was for many years used as a place of sepulture by the Allardyce family, and a small chapel adjoining it, originally dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was the burial place of the Arbuthnott family. The modern woodwork and galleries were consumed by fire in 1889. The celebrated Dr. Arbuthnott, the intimate friend of Pope and Swift, was the son of a former minister and a native of this parish. A district church was erected at FIDDES in 1910. Arbuthnott has since 1641 given the title of viscount to a family of the same name which became distinguished in the 12th century. Sir Robert Arbuthnott, for his loyalty to Charles II., being created Baron Inverbervie and Viscount Arbuthnott by that monarch, and the present peer resides at Arbuthnott House. Acreage of the parish, 9,584; rateable value, £6,662; population in 1911, 674.

AUCHINBLAE AND FORDOUN

AUCHINBLAE, a village in the parish of Fordoun, is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Luther water, 26 miles south-by-west from Aberdeen, 16 north from Montrose, 11 south-west from Stonehaven, 6 north-east from Fetter cairn, 5 north from Laurencekirk, 3 west from Fordoun station on the Caledonian railway and in Kincardineshire poor combination. In consequence of the salubrity and pureness of the air and the many beautiful and romantic walks in the immediate neighbourhood, it is much frequented during summer by families from the sea-coast towns of Arbroath, Montrose, Stonehaven and Aberdeen. The town was lighted by gas in 1840, but the use of this is discontinued and paraffin oil substituted. The present parish church, erected in 1829, and standing on a high rock, is a large edifice in the Gothic style, with a western tower about 100 feet in height. The United Free church stands in the valley. The Episcopal church of St. Palladius, at Drumtochty, built in 1886, will seat 153 persons. A public hall was erected in 1870 by subscription, at a cost of £500. There is a distillery belonging to the Auchinblae Distillery Co. Limited, and a branch of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. A park, containing tennis courts, bowling green &c. on the Drumtochty estate, and close to the village, is open to the public. There is also a golf course of nine holes. Fordoun parish extends from east to west about 10 miles, and in breadth about 7. The southern part is level, but the north is mountainous, having a thin soil and inferior in fertility to the lower part. In the western part of the parish, about a mile north-east from Fettercairn, is Castleton farm and St. Catherine's burial ground, formerly part of the old town of Kincardine, which ceased to be the chief town of the county in the reign of James VI. when Stonehaven obtained that distinction. In the vicinity are the remains of the royal palace or castle of Kincardine, which appears to have been a royal residence previous to the death of Kenneth III. in 994: it stands on the termination of a small ridge at an elevation of about 60 or 80 feet above the adjoining plain, and affords a fine view of the most beautiful part of the Howe o' the Mearns. It was in this palace that John Baliol resigned his crown to Edward I. of England, July 2nd, 1296: in the 17th century the palace came into the possession of the Earl of Middleton, after whose decease it became ruinous, and was utilised as a quarry. Near to Fordoun House are distinct vestiges of a Roman encampment, and on the hill above Newlands are the remains of a pre-historic grave mound. About a mile west of Drumtochty Castle, in a retired and secluded glen, are the sites of several oratories and seven wells, one of which, a fine spring called "Brightwell," is considered to be among the most copious in Scotland. Paldy fair, for cattle and horses, is held third Friday in July, and an auction mart is held at Fordoun every Saturday for the sale of cattle &c. The area of the parish is 26,859 acres; rateable value, £18,918; population in 1911, 1,717, of which number 427 were returned for Auchinblae.

BANCHORY-TERNAN is a parish on the banks of the Dee, in Kincardineshire poor combination and Stonehaven small debt court district. It is bounded by Durris on the east, Kincardine O'Neil on the west, Midmar on the north and Strachan on the south. The river Dee is here crossed by an iron truss bridge (1789-1829) of 175 feet span, and three stone arches. The village of Banchory, founded in 1805, stands on the north side of the Dee, 18 miles south-west of Aberdeen, and has a station about half a mile distant on the Deeside branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. In 1885 it became a burgh by adopting the police Act of 1862, and is governed by nine commissioners, with the usual officials under the Act. It is lighted with gas from works belonging to a Limited Company. The parish church, which stands at the east end of the burgh, was erected in 1824, and is in the Gothic style, with a tower and clock, and affords sittings for 1,250 persons. The United Free church, in the High street, erected in 1880, at a cost of £3,000, upon land given by Sir Robert Burnett, 11th bart (d. 1894), is an edifice of pink and white granite, in the Early English style, with a tower 100 feet high, containing an illuminated clock: the church will seat 700 persons. There is also another United Free church. The Episcopal church of St. Ternan, built in 1851, will seat 166 persons. The Rev. William Watson Hawdon B.A. of Durham University, has been rector since 1903. The Town Hall, a building erected in 1873, contains a large hall for entertainments. The Banchory Club and Library, held in the Town hall, was opened January, 1893: it contains over 1,000 volumes: a small annual subscription fee is charged to members. The Post Office is in the High street and was erected in 1910. There are branches here of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. A public park of about 16 acres was opened on the 3rd of August, 1887, the land for which was presented by the late Sir Robert Burnett bart.: it has been beautifully laid out, at a cost of about £800, and there is a large sheet of water, which in winter time is resorted to for skating and curling. On the road from the village to the railway station is an ornamental drinking fountain, erected in 1879 to the memory of Col. William Burnett Ramsay, of Banchory Lodge. The parish is finely wooded and contains several gentlemen's seats and residences. In the parish are two or three lochs, one of which was some time ago drained and brought under cultivation. The water supply for the city of Aberdeen is taken from the Dee at the western boundary of this parish, about 3½ miles above the village of Banchory. Inchmarlo House is the seat of Duncan Davidson esq. D.L., J.P.; Raemoir House, of Mrs. Innes and Riverston, of Miss Ramsay. About half-a-mile south of Banchory is the Bridge of Feugh, a place much frequented by visitors. The bed of the Feugh here is very rocky and the stream forms a picturesque cascade, and afterwards falls into the Dee. The cattle shows of the Deeside Agricultural Society are held at Banchory in July of each year. Auction sales for horses, cattle, sheep, pigs &c. are held fortnightly on Wednesdays. The parish contains an area of 20,079 statute acres; rateable value, £ ; area of burgh, 546 acres; rateable value, £47,790; population in 1911, 3,377, the burgh containing 1,633.

CRATHES, 3½ miles east, is in Banchory parish and has a station on the Deeside railway. Crathes Castle is the seat of Col. Sir Thomas Burnett bart. D.L., J.P.

BERVIE

BERVIE (or Inverbervie, as it is frequently written) is a parish and royal burgh in Kincardineshire poor combination, with a railway station on the Montrose and Bervie section of the North British line (there is also a station on the same line in the village of Gourdon); it is 33 miles north-by-east from Montrose, 10 south-by-west from Stonehaven and 25 south-by-west from Aberdeen, on the coast road from the last-named city to Dundee, and at the mouth of the Bervie, here crossed by a bridge of a single span of 103 feet. At the mouth of the river is a small basin, which opens into an extensive bay, navigable for vessels almost at any time. The principal trade of the town is the spinning of flax. The river is a fine stream, and in the driest season always has an abundance of water. The town is well lighted with gas, and the electric light has also been introduced into several of the public works. Bervie was constituted a royal burgh by charter from King David II. as a return for the kindness and hospitality with which he was received by the poor inhabitants, when he was forced in here by stress of weather, and the spot where he landed is still called Craig David. James VI. renewed the charter, confirming all the privileges and immunities granted by King David. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and four councillors. Together with Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin and Forfar, it forms the Montrose parliamentary district, constituted under the "Reform Act" of 1832, and returning one member. The sheriff small debt court, which used to be held in Bervie, is now removed to Stonehaven. Registration courts are still held once a year. There is a church of the Establishment and a United Free church. The area of the parish is 2,331 acres; rateable value, landward, £3,997; area of burgh, 208 acres; rateable value, £5,011; population in 1911, 2,391; of this number 1,173 were returned for the royal and parliamentary burgh. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 191.

GOURDON is a fishing village, one mile from Bervie. Population in 1911, 1,117.

COOKNEY, including Netherley, Newtonhill and Muchalls, was created a quoad sacra parish and registration district in 1859 out of the northern side of Fetteresso. The parish, bounded on the east by the North Sea and on the south by Fetteresso, is about 6 miles long from west to east and 4 miles broad, the soil along the coast being well cultivated and fertile, but there is much barren land to the west. Most of this was at one time common, but it was divided among the neighbouring heritors, and is now under cultivation and much improved. The parish church is 5 miles north-north-west from Stonehaven and about 3 miles from the village of Skateraw. There is also a United Free church at BOURTREEBUSH. At Muchalls, which has a station on the Caledonian railway, is the Episcopal church of St. Ternan, built in 1831, and seating 276 persons. Here also is a coast guard station. Blackhills Cave here was explored in 1896, and found to consist of two large chambers. Muchalls Castle, formerly a residence of the Burnett family, but now the seat of Col. Hugh Gough Grant C.B. was built in the 17th century and is beautifully decorated. There is a fishing village, Skateraw, in the parish. Population in 1911, 1,278.

DRUMLITHIE AND GLENBERVIE

DRUMLITHIE is a village in the parish of Glenbervie, 22 miles south-west of Aberdeen, 18 north from Montrose, 7 north-by-west from Bervie and about 7 south-west from Stonehaven, on the road to Laurencekirk, situated nearly in the centre of the east side of the county, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. Here also is a United Free church, and the Episcopal church of St. John the Baptist, served by the rector of St. Palladius's church, Drumtochty, Fordoun. The parish of Glenbervie, which is in Kincardineshire poor combination, is upwards of 6 miles in length, by a breadth of 3 in some parts and 5 at others; it is bounded on the west by the Water of Bervie and Fordoun, on the east by Dunnottar and Fetteresso, on the south and south-east by Arbuthnott and on the north by the hills of Strachan and Durris. The soil of the upper part of the district is of bluish clay, and in the lower a dry fertile loam. The northern portion of the parish lies partly among the Grampian Hills. The river Bervie bounds the district partly on the west, and the Carron has its source within it. The hamlet of Glenbervie, which stands in the vicinity of the former river, is a barony of the Douglas family, and has an Established church. In the churchyard are interred some of the ancestors of the poet Robert Burns. The parish of Glenbervie contains 15,054 statute acres; rateable value, £7,434; population in 1911, 779.

DRUMOAK, which is partly in Kincardineshire and Aberdeenshire, will be found with the information for the latter county.

DUNNOTTAR, anciently spelt Dunfother, is a parish of an irregular form, the eastern side running from Stonehaven to the south, a distance of 5 miles and from thence about 5 miles north; abutting on the parishes of Kinneff and Glenbervie, from thence descending to the Carron Water at the base of Carmont Hill, where Dunnottar and Glenbervie are met by the parish of Fetteresso. The seaward boundary of the parish is a continuous chain of rocks and cliffs containing many caverns, which render Dunnottar one of the most romantic places on the east coast. It is in Kincardineshire poor combination. The principal object of interest in the parish is Dunnottar Castle, within the walls of which formerly stood the parish church. It is seated on a perpendicular rock, 150 feet above the level of the sea, and about 3 acres in extent, and is almost separated from the land by a deep chasm. The oldest part of the present ruins, known as the Earl's tower, was built towards the end of the 14th century by Sir Robert Keith, whose ancestor led the cavalry at Bannockburn. During the Commonwealth, the regalia of Scotland were placed for safety under the care of the Ogilvies, but the castle being attacked by General Lambert, the regalia, by the direction of Mrs. Ogilvie, were secretly removed to the manse of Kinneff, and then concealed under the flooring of the church, below the pulpit. After a siege by Cromwell's army of eight months' duration the castle was ultimately surrendered to the Cromwellians upon honourable terms in May, 1652; later it was used as a state prison, and the Covenanters' stone in Dunnottar churchyard preserves the memory of those who perished there. The castle was dismantled shortly after the rising of 1715, when its proprietor, George (Keith), Earl Mariscnal, was attainted for high treason. Since that period the castle became by purchase the property of Sir Alexander Keith, of Dunnottar and Ravelston, and is now the property of Alexander B. Innes esq. of Raemoir. The fabric is still fairly entire. Here is an Established church. The old town of Stonehaven is in this parish, which embraces an area of 7,781 acres; rateable value, 1910-11, landward, £7,644; burghal (Stonehaven), £5,164; population in 1911, 2,255, of whom 1,601 were in Stonehaven.

EDZELL, which is partly in Kincardineshire and Forfarshire, will be found with the information for the latter county.

FETTERCAIRN is a parish and village, the latter being 98 miles north-by-east from Edinburgh, 12 north-west from Montrose, 16½ south-west from Stonehaven, 11 north from Brechin, and 5 north-west from Laurencekirk, and situated on a small streamlet, a tributary of the North Esk. The parish is in Kincardineshire poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Laurencekirk. The river is here crossed by the Bridge of Gannachy, which springs from the precipitous rocks on either side, at a great elevation above the water. The nearest railway station is Laurencekirk, 5 miles distant, on the main line of the Caledonian railway. Here are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, at Fasque, built in 1847, affords 102 sittings; the living, value £200, has been held since 1909 by the Rev. Charles Frederic Arabin Wimberley M.A. of Durham University. In the village is a large public hall, containing a billiard room, reading room and library: here also is a branch of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, and in the neighbourhood is a large distillery. In the village square stands the ancient cross of Kincardine. About a mile west is a ruin called "Fenella's Castle," in connection with which is a singular tradition concerning the murder of Kenneth III. by a powerful lady named Fenella, in revenge for the death of her son, who was slain by that monarch in rebellion. At one end of the village stands a graceful arch, erected to commemorate the visit of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort, on the 21st September, 1861. There is also a fountain erected to the late Sir John Stuart Forbes, of Fettercairn, d. 27 May, 1886. The parish of Fettercairn lies at the foot of the lower range of the Grampians, and extends considerably into the Mearns; the soil on the west is light and sharp, with a small mixture of moss: on the east it becomes deeper and of a fertile clay loam. The name of the parish is derived from the said Fenella cairn or castle and the eminences or moraines in the vicinity. The principal landowners are Capt. Sir John Robert Gladstone bart. Lord Clinton, Col. Charles McInroy C.B. and the Earl of Kintore P.C., G.C.M.G. The area is 14,846 acres: rateable value, £11,254. Population, 1911, 1,301 in the civil parish and 1,259 in the ecclesiastical parish.

The salmon fishery is carried on here. Fetteresso Castle is the seat of R. W. Duff esq. D.L., J.P. and was once the ancient abode of the Earls Marischal, but has since been altered. KINNEFF, with which is incorporated the district of Caterline, lies on the sea coast south from Dunnottar, and is bounded by Arbuthnott on the west and Bervie on the south. It is in Kincardineshire poor combination, and extends from the Water of Bervie to the northern point, about 5 miles along the coast, which is exceedingly bold and rocky. The parish church is about 3 miles north-east from Bervie terminal station on a branch from Montrose of the North British railway; here also is a United Free church. At Caterline is the Episcopal church of St. Philip, built in 1848, and seating 182 persons. Upon the margin of the sea, not above 100 yards distant from the church, are the ruins of a castle. The old castle of Fiddes, also in this parish, and in a good state of preservation, is famous as the scene of the legend of Thrummy Cap, a poem written in broad Scotch, in 1796, by John Burness, a cousin of Robert Burns. A lighthouse was erected on Tod Head in 1847. In Kinneff church the regalia of Scotland were deposited from 1651 to the Restoration, being ingeniously conveyed by Mrs. Grainger, the minister's wife, out of the Castle of Dunnottar, while besieged by General Lambert, and secreted under the flooring of the church, beneath the pulpit. The area is 7,130 acres; rateable value, £7,267 17s. 2d.; population in 1911, 835.

LAURENCEKIRK is a parish and burgh, 93 miles north-by-east from Edinburgh, 10 north from Montrose and 14 south-west from Stonehaven, situated on the main road from Perth to Aberdeen, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. A sheriff small debt court is held three times a year, and the parish is in Kincardineshire poor combination. Formerly a mere hamlet, seated amidst an uncultivated tract of country, it is indebted for the consequence it enjoys at the present day to Lord Gardenstone, a judge of the court of session, who, in the year 1772, took it under his fostering care and patronage. In 1779 he procured for the place the privileges of a burgh and barony, with the right of holding a weekly market. The town contains a main street, nearly a mile in length, another parallel to it, and several smaller streets branching from these, the whole being well lighted with gas. It is governed by a burgh council and police commission, consisting of 9 members. A police court has been established and is held when occasion requires. The branches of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited are established here, and there is also a Savings Bank. The parish, formerly called "Conveth," is 4 miles in length and 3 at its greatest breadth. A ridge of hills stretches through the whole extent, from east to west, sloping gradually to the north and south; the small river Luther passes through the district and numerous brooks intersect it. The name Laurencekirk is derived from the dedication of the old church to St. Laurence. There are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Laurence, and the Rev. Charles Shackerley Coldwell M.A. of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, has been incumbent since 1914. In 1866 a public hall was erected by subscription, at a cost of some £1,400, called St. Laurence Hall. There is a brewery here, and an extensive cattle auction mart. A fair is held on the first Wednesday in March (St. Anthony's fair—old style). Horse market on the Monday before the first Friday in March. Cattle and grain markets are held every Monday throughout the year. The principal landowner is Mrs. Pearson, of Johnston Lodge. The area of the parish is 5,613 acres; rateable value, landward £6,281; area of burgh, 570 acres; rateable value, £7,657; in 1911 the population of the parish was 1,921, and the town 1,438.

NIGG is a parish and village situated near the termination of the ridge of the Grampian mountains and bounded on the north by the river Dee, which separates the parish from Aberdeen, and on the south and west by Banchory-Devenick. It extends 4 miles in length by 2 in breadth. The village is distant 2 miles south from Aberdeen, and about 2 miles north from Cove Bay station on the Caledonian railway, and has an Established church. The coast is bold and rocky, the north-east point, called "Girdleness," being a remarkable promontory, on the south side of the estuary of the Dee, and having a lighthouse. Near the small bay of Nigg are the ruins of the old parish church, dedicated to St. Fitticks. The district comprises the fishing village of Torry, which has a small harbour and a pier. Torry is now included in the city of Aberdeen for municipal, school board and parochial purposes, but for parliamentary purposes is in Kincardineshire. The Victoria Bridge, a granite structure, now spans the Dee and connects Torry with Aberdeen. Cove Bay is also a small fishing village in the parish, 4 miles south from Aberdeen, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and has an Episcopal Church dedicated to St. Mary, which is served from Aberdeen; there is also an East Coast Mission Hall. The parish has an acreage of 3,979; rateable value, £17,166; population in 1911, 1,573.

ST. CYRUS, formerly called Ecclesgreig, is a parish and village, the latter being 4 miles south-west from Johnshaven, between the coast and the road from Montrose, and having a station on the Montrose and Bervie railway. The parish, which measures 7 miles in length and 3 in breadth, lies partly on the sea shore, having Benholm on the east, Garvock on the north, and Marykirk on the north-west and the North Esk river washes part of its western boundary; the parish is in the small debt court district of Stonehaven. There are Established and United Free churches. General Stratton, a hero of the Peninsula and Waterloo, left legacies for the poor of the district. The charities also include the interest on £1,000, left by Col. Orr, and distributed as follows:—one-fifth to the poor, the other four-fifths for the oldest, youngest, shortest and tallest brides married in the Established church here. The principal landowners are Maurice Cecil Forsyth-Grant esq. J.P. the Earl of Kintore P.C., G.C.M.G. David Scott Porteous esq. D.L., J.P. James B. Grahame esq. and the trustees of the late Barron Grahame esq. The sea salmon fisheries along the coast of the parish are very valuable; the yearly rental amounting to about £2,800, and of the river fishings to about £1,500. The surface of the parish is pretty level, but is intersected with several glens and rivulets, and elevated in some places to little hills. More than three-fourths of it is arable. The burn in Den Finella forms a beautiful cascade by falling over a rock 63 feet in height. On a peninsular rock, the base of which is washed by the sea, stand the ruins of the Kame of Mathers, formerly the residence of the Barclay family. The Castle of Lauriston is also an ancient building. The parish, which contains limestone quarries and plenty of excellent freestone, has an area of 8,227 statute acres; rateable value, £13,957; population in 1911, 1,222.

STONEHAVEN (or Stanehive) is a seaport and the county town of Kincardine and a police burgh within the parishes of Dunnottar and Fetteresso, 110 miles north-by-east from Edinburgh, 68 north-east from Perth, 66 south-south-east from Banff, 35 north-by-east from Arbroath, 23 north-east from Montrose, 15 south from Aberdeen and 10 north-north-east from Bervie. It is a favourite summer resort, being situate on a beautiful bay of the sea, within three-quarters of a mile of a station on the Caledonian railway, on the coast of the North Sea, at the mouth of the Carron stream, and flanked on both sides by lofty hills. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. The place, though not a royal burgh, is of considerable importance, and comprises the old and new towns; the former lies on the south bank of the Carron, adjacent to the harbour, in the parish of Dunnottar; the other on a peninsula, or angle, formed by the Carron and the Cowie, in the parish of Fetteresso, the two being connected by a bridge forming a continuation of the road from the south to Aberdeen. The new town is laid out on a regular plan, having broad streets, with a square in the centre, in which stands a good market house, erected in 1827, and surmounted by a tower with spire 130 feet in height. The town hall, in Allardice street, opposite the market house, was erected in 1878, at a cost of £4,000; it is vested in the Council, and contains news, billiard and reading rooms. The harbour is a natural basin, sheltered on the south-east by a high rock which projects into the sea, and having on the north-east a quay that affords every facility for loading or unloading vessels. The shipping of the port is chiefly employed in the coal and lime trade, and occasionally in exporting grain. During the season herring fishing is carried on. The celebrated Royal Glenury Distillery is in the vicinity, and the manufacture of woollens is carried on, besides which there is a tannery, where a large quantity of leather is produced, a brewery and a net factory. Here also are two banking houses, one savings bank, and several good hotels. The sheriff ordinary court is held every Wednesday in time of session. Two newspapers are published here, the "Stonehaven Journal," every Thursday, and the "Mearns Leader," every Friday. The Established Church of Dunnottar is situated near the town, that of Fetteresso being within the borough boundary. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches in the town. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. James, and the Rev. Canon William Leslie Christie M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been rector since 1890. There are cemeteries at Fetteresso and Dunnottar, both about 1 mile distant. A weekly grain market and cattle sale is held on Thursday. Fairs: May 27th, feeing; November 27th, feeing. Annual holidays: Second Monday in May, last Friday in June and second Monday in September. The principal landowners are Sir Alexander Baird bart. D.L. Robert William Duff esq. D.L. Rev. W. D. Innes, W. H. Ritchie esq. H. O. Ritchie esq. and Lieut.-Col. Lewis L. Nicol. The area of the burgh is 354 acres; rateable value, £24,476; population in 1911, 4,266.

KINROSS-SHIRE

THIS small inland county formed the north-western quarter of Fifeshire up to the year 1426, and at the Revolution (1689) was enlarged by the addition of Orwell, Cleish and Tullibole, which parishes before that period formed a portion of Fifeshire; Perthshire being its northern boundary, and Clackmannan on the western border. In figure the county takes the form of a square, although the line of its boundary is very irregular. It extends from east to west about 13 miles; and from north to south about 11 miles. The total superfices of the county amounts to 81.9 square miles, or 52,410 acres of land, and 3,439 of water; in the county are seven lakes; of cultivated land there are 35,350 acres, and of uncultivated 3,033 acres. This is the smallest of the Scottish counties except Clackmannan, and in population numbers the least. Its name is significant of its local situation, importing the "Head of the peninsula." The population in 1901 was 6,981 and in 1911, 7,527 (3,617 males and 3,910 females). The number of houses in 1911 was:—Inhabited, 1,848; uninhabited, 244; building, 13.

Soil, Surface, Produce &c.—The boundaries or outskirts of the county are generally hilly; and the shire may be described as an open vale or plain, environed by uplands and hills. The Ochil hills, which separate the district from Strathearn, are the northern boundary; the Lomond hills are the eastern; Benarty hill the south-eastern, and Cleish hills the south and south-western. These eminences are generally adapted for pasture and the rearing of cattle; but they are likewise in several places suited to cultivation. In the Ochil range, Slungie hill is 1,354 feet, and Tilliery 1,787, while Benarty is 1,131 feet above sea level, and Dumglow, in the Cleish range, 1,241. The original condition of Kinross resembled that of the contiguous county of Fife, having been of a moory, mossy nature. Up to a comparatively recent epoch the lands were bleak and unreclaimed—a circumstance partly attributable to a certain local characteristic—namely, the remarkable peculiarity in its proprietary of being much divided into farms, each owned in feu by its tenant; there are, in consequence, more resident lairds in proportion to its extent in this part of the country than are to be found in any other division of Scotland. The farms, it appears, were feued about the commencement of the 18th century from the house of Kinross to the tenants then in possession, whose descendants inherit the properties, paying for them an exceedingly trifling duty or quit-rent. The marches of the various farms not having been accurately defined, and being more confused by the practice of "runrig," it was long before the county manifested any very active signs of improvement. Within the recollection of persons still living, few districts were worse cultivated, or less profitable than Kinross-shire; but the prime minister Pitt's institution of rack-rent taxation, in conjunction with other circumstances (among which undoubtedly may be included the good example exhibited by neighbouring agriculturists), ultimately induced a spirited change; and now the progress of agriculture—the mode of draining, inclosing and planting—can compete with those of Fife and most other districts. Drainage, on an extensive and effectual system, has been carried into operation on the Carse, east from Loch Leven, and on its margin; in all directions in this particular quarter productive arable fields present themselves, in place of desolate moors and sombrous mosses. Oats and barley are the crops most cultivated, but great attention is paid to the growing of turnip- and potatoes. The chief crops as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1914," are:—Oats, 6,134 acres; wheat, 144; barley, including bere, 395; rye, 128; total corn crops, 6,801; turnips and swedes, 2,310; potatoes, 1,013; rape, 75; total green crops, 3,435; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 2,653 acres; pasture (not for hay), 6,702 acres. The total area of land is 52,410, of which 13,453 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing); 14,397 permanent grass; 19,694 arable land; and 2,790 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1914 was: horses, used for agriculture and brood mares, 707; unbroken horses, 320; other horses, 107; cows in milk, 1,948; cows in calf but not in milk, 126; heifers in calf, 148; other cattle, two years and above, 1,308; one year and under two, 2,017; under one year, 1,468; ewes kept for breeding, 14,286; other sheep, 19,948; pigs, 710.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 37; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 50; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 14; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 15; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 17; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 28; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 31; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 79; above 300 acres, 20; total, 291.

At this day many good roads intersect the shire, and various parts of it are sheltered by thriving plantations. The manufactures of the county are only of moderate importance, and consist chiefly in the weaving of linen fabrics, and the making of plaids, tartan shawls, and other woollen goods. The only mineral raised is coal, the total being included with the Argyllshire in the "Mineral Statistics for 1913."

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—There are no rivers of magnitude in this county; the only ones that can be named are the Gairney, on the southern boundary of Kinross parish; the South Queich, that runs below the town of Kinross; and the North Queich, on the northern border of the parish—all of which, and a few rivulets besides, discharge themselves into Loch Leven. This beautiful and noble expanse of water (for which see Kinross town) lies at the east end of a wide vale, and nearly in the centre of the county; the small river Leven issues from it, and pursues an easterly course through Fifeshire. Besides Loch Leven there are a few minor lakes, or (as they are properly termed) tarns, on the eminences above Cleish. The railways (part of the North British system) consist of a line coming from Alloa and entering the county near Rumbling Brig, which at Kinross is joined by another line which runs up north from Dunfermline through Kelty and Gairney Bridge, and the united line sweeping round the north end of Loch Leven, leaves the county at Burnside.

Kinross-shire contains only five complete parishes, and has only one town, Kinross, with a population in 1911 of 3,094. The county, which has no parliamentary burgh, joins with Clackmannanshire in returning one member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency of Kinross-shire in 1915 numbered 1,813.

BLAIRINGONE is a village and a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parishes of Fossoway and Tulliebole in this county, Clackmannan and Dollar in Clackmannanshire and Muckhart in Perthshire, and is 2½ miles south-east from Dollar station on the Devon Valley and Stirling section of the North British railway. The church is a plain edifice of stone, built in 1836, and the interior has since been refitted at considerable expense. It was chiefly owing to the liberality of the late Mr. Wylie, of Arndean, that the parish was endowed, and at his death he bequeathed a further sum to increase the value of the living. The population in 1911 was 418, viz.: Kinross-shire, 291; Clackmannanshire, 120; Perthshire, 7.

CROOK OF DEVON, see FOSSOWAY.

FOSSOWAY and TULLIEBOLE form a united parish in the western part of the county, bounded on the north by the parish of Forgandenny, on the east by Orwell and Kinross, south by Cleish and the county of Fife and on the west and north-west by the counties of Clackmannan and Perth; it is in the small debt court district of Kinross and has two stations, Crook of Devon and Rumbling Bridge, on the Devon Valley and Stirling section of the North British railway. A part of the parish was formerly in Perthshire, but under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 (boundary order No. 120), a large portion was transferred to this county for civil purposes; the remainder was retained in its original county, but attached to the parish of Glendevon. The parish contains two small rural villages, named Blairingone and Crook of Devon; the latter is on the river Devon, 6 miles west from Kinross, and has a railway station. There are Established and United Free churches. POWMILL and CARNBO are hamlets in the parish. At Powmill is a Public Hall, erected in 1910 by Mrs. Moubray. About 2 miles from Crook of Devon, following the course of the river, and about 7 from Kinross, is the celebrated Rumbling Bridge, and a little further on is the equally famous Cauldron Linn, noted also for the picturesqueness of the surrounding scenery, and since the opening of the Devon Valley railway the locality has become much frequented by tourists. The Marquess of Lansdowne K.G., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., G.C.M.G., P.C. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 15,790 acres; rateable value, £14,231; population in 1911, 1,059 in the civil parish and 805 in the ecclesiastical parish, of which 37 were in Perthshire.

KELTY BRIDGE, see BEATH (FIFESHIRE).

KINNESSWOOD, see PORTMOAK.

KINROSS is a town and police burgh, nearly in the centre of the county, and a parish, extending 6 miles from east to west by 5 from north to south, and is bounded south by Fifeshire, north by the parish of Orwell, east by Portmoak and west by Fossoway. The town, which has two stations (Kinross junction and Loch Leven) on the North British railway, is 27 miles north-west from Edinburgh (via Forth Bridge), 19 south-west from Cupar-Fife, 17 south from Perth and 10 north from Dunfermline, and is the head of a sheriff court district, courts being held every Tuesday during session; it stands at the foot of the vale of Kinross, on the shore of Loch Leven, with the North road running through it, and formerly consisted of one main street and several ancient looking lanes, but has been partly rebuilt and much improved. The Town Hall was built in 1868. The County Buildings, in which the courts are held, were erected in 1826, at a cost of £2,000, and a police station has since been added. The parish church is a modern building in the Gothic style; there are also two United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Paul, an edifice in the Gothic style, was erected in 1875 and consecrated in 1881, and affords 150 sittings: the incumbency has been held since 1912 by the Rev. Miles Douglas Fletcher M.A. of Keble College, Oxford. The public Free Library, the gift of Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. was erected, with museum attached, in 1905, on a site presented by Sir Basil T. G. Montgomery bart. and has a reading room and lending department of upwards of 3,000 books. The Isolation Hospital is situated at a little distance from the town. A golf course has been laid out near the Kinross Junction railway station. The Royal Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the British Linen Co. Bank have branches here. There is a woollen spinning mill and a linen power loom factory in the town, and shawl weaving is carried on. The "Kinross-shire Advertiser" and the "Kinross-shire Courier" newspapers are published here every Friday for Saturday. At the hamlet of Tillyochie, in the parish, and 3 miles distant from the town of Kinross, there is a woollen spinning mill. Kinross House, the property and residence of Sir Basil T. G. Montgomery bart. is a mansion designed and built by Sir William Bruce, the architect of the modern part of Holyrood House; it stands near to the northern entrance to the town, and close to the landing place from Loch Leven Castle, the ruins of which occupy a prominent position on an island at the north-west end of the loch; this castle is best known as the prison of Queen Mary, who owed her escape from it to the devotion of George Douglas, a son of Lady Douglas, who as wife of the custodian of the castle was virtually the Queen's jailer; George Douglas arranged a series of signals with the Hamiltons and her other adherents, and bringing her by boat to the landing place near the churchyard, threw the castle keys into the loch, and placed the Queen, 2nd May, 1568, in the care of her friends; in 1805, a number of keys, supposed to have been those thrown into the loch, were found near this landing, and eight small keys of antique make were also discovered nearer to the castle. The first mentioned are now in the possession of the Earl of Morton, the others being in the Antiquarian Museum at Edinburgh. The loch is twelve miles in circumference, and contains four islands, the largest of which occupies nearly 100 English acres; upon this latter stood the ancient priory of St. Serf (or St. Servanus), and there are still remains of a church, apparently of Romanesque character, with an internal length of 21 ft. 6 in. and 14 ft. 6 in. wide. There seems to have been a still earlier monastic foundation, and an abstract of the chartulary of this house is in the register of the priory of St. Andrews, to which David I. about 1145, granted the island of Lochleven. The loch is stocked with trout of a red colour and first-rate quality, besides perch &c. The excellent sport obtained, and the other attractions of the locality, draw a yearly increasing number of visitors. The fishing season begins on the 6th March and closes on the 6th September. Rod fishing begins generally in April, for which there is an ample supply of boats on the loch. The general appearance of the country is hilly and for the most part agricultural. Sir Basil T. G. Montgomery bart. and Alexander Percy Haigh esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 7,252 acres; rateable value, £16,114 (not including railway rate); area of burgh, 257 acres; rateable value, £18,339; the population in 1901 was 2,655 and in 1911, 3,094, including 2,618 in the burgh.

MILNATHORT is a large village in the parish of Orwell, and a station on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline to Perth section of the North British railway: it is on North Queich water, 2 miles north from Kinross and 8 north-west from Leslie. The local government is carried on by a Parish Council. There are three places of worship, the parish church and two United Free churches; the Milnathort United Free church, erected in 1868, at a cost of £3,000, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and has a tower with spire 125 feet high. The Public Hall, standing in the centre of the village, also has a tower with spire and containing a clock. A weekly sale of live stock is held on Monday at the auction mart, adjoining the railway station, and a corn market is also held on the same day. A feeing market is held here in October. The Clydesdale Bank Limited has a branch here. The Reid Memorial School was founded by Mrs. Reid, of Thomanean, in memory of her late husband, but has since been taken over by the School Board; there is also a public school. The population in 1911 was 1,178.

It stands on a dry and gravelly soil and is protected on the north, north-east and north-west by wooded hills, the principal front being directly south. The building comprises 60 bedrooms for patients, all with a southern aspect, dining, drawing and writing rooms, a library and various apartments for medical treatment. Baths of different kinds are provided on each corridor. The attached estate includes miles of beautiful walks amid sheltering pine trees, and within walking or driving distance there are many places of great historical interest and natural beauty On the low ground, towards Loch Leven stands the ruins of the ancient castle o Burleigh, formerly the residence of the Lords Balfour of Burleigh. Mrs. Purvis-Russell is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,118 acres; rateable value, £19,075; population in 1911, 1,983 of which 1,178 were in the village of Milnathort.

Kinnesswood is a village in the parish, on the east side of Loch Leven, 5 miles east from Kinross and 2½ south-east from Mawcarse Junction station on the North British railway. The village is famous as the birthplace, 27 March, 1746, of Michael Bruce, a Scottish poet of note; the house in which the poet was born, and in which he died, 6 July, 1767, has been restored. Scotlandwell is also a village in the parish, 5 miles west from Leslie and 3 south-east from Mawcarse Junction station. Balgedie is a hamlet 3 miles south-east from Milnathort. Besides the parish church, there are also two United Free churches, one at Portmoak and the other at Easter Balgedie. Bishophill, the western peak of the Lomonds, is in this parish, and occupies a large portion of the area in the north-east. This hill is 1,150 feet above Loch Leven and 1,492 feet above sea level, and contains lime and freestone. Wells of pure water are numerous on the west side of the hill, and in one place, near Scotlandwell, there are three, with a copious flow of water. Andrew Winton, the chronicler of Scotland, was a native of this parish, which for twenty-eight years was under the charge of the Rev. Ebenezer Erskine, one of the founders of the Secession church. Sir Basil T. Graham-Montgomery bart. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 9,841 acres; rateable value, £9,403; population in 1911, 845 in the civil parish and 869 in the ecclesiastical parish, which included 24 in Fifeshire.

KIRKCUDBRIGHTSHIRE,

A COUNTY in the south-west of Scotland, on the Solway Firth, and the only remaining "stewartry," or district, once governed direct by the king by means of his steward (or stewart); the name, however, is all that exists of this ancient jurisdiction, the district being treated in all respects as the other counties, the county occupying the eastern portion of the ancient district known as Galloway; Wigtownshire being the other part on the west. It is bounded by Dumfriesshire on the east and north-east; on the south by the Solway Firth; by the county of Ayr on the north and north-west, and by Wigtownshire and Wigtown Bay on the west. In extent it measures, from south-east to north-west, about 44 miles, by a breadth varying from 20 to 30 miles; the narrowest part being on the north and towards its north-western limits; it comprises 575,832 acres of land and 6,686 of water. About 192,100 acres is under cultivation. This shire in point of size is the eighth, and in population the nineteenth of the counties of Scotland. The population in 1901 was 39,383, and in 1911, 38,367, viz.:—Males, 18,069; females, 20,298. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 8,576, and in 1911, inhabited, 8,911; uninhabited, 671; and building, 30.

Early History.—After being overrun by the Strathclyde Britons, who appear to have dislodged the Picts and Scots, who originally came to this district from Ireland, it was colonised by the Romans in 79 A.D. when they crossed the Solway Firth; these retired in 410 and the Cumbrian Britons took possession of all the west country, with their capital at Dumbarton; this connection with Cumbria continued for some time. In Kirkcudbright town Edward I. spent some time during the warfare of 1300, when he subdued Galloway, of which this stewartry then formed a part, and in 1455 it was visited by James II. in the course of his march through Galloway. A few years later, in 1461, Henry VI. with his queen and court, fled thither after his defeat at Towton; and in 1508 James IV. was hospitably entertained in the town. Queen Mary spent her last night in Scotland at Dundrennan Abbey.

Soil, Surface, Produce and Manufactures.—The soil of the county is principally composed of loam mixed with sand, incumbent sometimes on gravel, and in many places on rock. Four of the most northerly parishes—Carsphairn, Dalry, Kells and Balmaclellan—are commonly designated the district of "Glenkens." If a line be drawn from the centre of Kirkpatrick-Irongray parish to Gatehouse-of-Fleet, all to the north-west, with little exception, is mountainous; while the south and east parts exhibit a fine champaign and cultivated country. The principal eminences in the shire are Criffell (or Crawfell), 1,867 feet; Cairnsmuir, 2,331; Cairnsmore, 2,612; Corscrieve, 2,668, and Merrick, 2,764 feet above the level of the sea. The ancient forest formerly covering this district can now only be traced in trifling remnants on the banks of the streams. It appeared that, so early as the 12th and 13th centuries, this hilly territory was under a productive process of agriculture, originated and improved by the monks of the different abbeys in the district; and it is upon record that in the memorable year 1300, when Edward I. subdued Galloway, he caused considerable quantities of wheat to be exported from the harbour of Kirkcudbright to Cumberland, and even to Dublin. In these times the staple products were wheat and oats, the culture of barley, peas and beans being very limited. In the 18th century measures were adopted to improve its agricultural capabilities, and the inclosure of the land with fences was the first attempt; but this judicious preliminary was encountered by a riotous opposition from the population, who rose in considerable numbers, under the title of "levellers," and proceeded to demolish the newly formed boundaries; and they were not subdued until the most energetic measures were employed. The county subsequently steadily advanced, and towards the close of the century the district could compete with adjacent shires in agricultural prosperity. Planting has been introduced by several noblemen and gentlemen of the stewartry, and much has been accomplished in reclaiming moss lands. The principal cereal grown is oats, and turnips and potatoes are also cultivated.

The chief crops as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1914," are:—Wheat, 14 acres; barley, including bere, 57 acres; oats, 24,442 acres; rye, 38 acres; beans, 12 acres; total corn crops, 24,566; potatoes, 1,804 acres; turnips and swedes, 10,956 acres; mangolds, 104 acres; cabbage, 92 acres; rape, 1,229 acres; vetches, tares &c. 84 acres; total green crops, 14,269; bare fallow, 225 acres; rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, for hay, 8,849; pasture (not for hay) 39,928 acres. The area of the county (exclusive of water) is 575,832 acres, of which 339,307 acres is mountain and heath land used for grazing; permanent grass, 99,501 acres; arable land, 87,899 acres; woods and plantations, 21,687 acres.

The live stock in 1914 comprised 3,319 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 47; unbroken horses, one year and above, 1,120; under one year, 445; other horses, 1,047; cows in milk, 15,906; in calf but not in milk, 1,041; heifers in calf, 4,441; other cattle, two years and above, 10,969; one year and under two, 11,684; under one year, 10,143; ewes kept for breeding, 157,448; other sheep, one year and above, 62,302; under one year, 156,915; sows kept for breeding, 1,105; other pigs, 11,658. The number of horses, cattle and sheep reared in the county is moderately large, and the breed of horses known as Galloways has given way to others of a large and stronger variety; while for dairy purposes the Ayrshire cattle are gradually superseding the black Galloway cow. Sheep and swine have considerably increased in numbers.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 215; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 281; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 147; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 101; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 110; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 126; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 177; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 334; above 300 acres, 155; total, 1,646

The district is very nearly destitute of coal, which, as well as the greater part of the lime used, is brought from Cumberland. In 1913, as shown by the "Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics," 71,097 tons of igneous rocks (which includes granite) were raised, value £33,670. Marl is found in great plenty, especially in the loch of Carlinwark, which contains an inexhaustible store of the best shell marl. The mineral wealth of the county consists chiefly in its granite, which is extensively wrought in the neighbourhood of Dalbeattie and Creetown, and for the polishing of which there are works at both places Besides the salmon fishings at the mouths of the rivers, the Solway Firth affords good fishing; the boats employed in which are registered in the adjoining county of Wigtown. The manufactures are of small value, and consist principally in the making of woollen goods.

Rivers, Railways &c.—The stewartry is intersected by numerous streams, which, uniting, form four considerable rivers; these are—the Dee, the Ken, the Cree, and the Ure. The Ken is considered the largest, joining the Dee below Loch Ken and then debouching at Kirkcudbright Bay. All these rivers rise in the north, and empty themselves into the Solway Firth or the Irish Sea. The smaller streams are the Fleet, the Tarf, the Deogh, and the Cluden. The Solway Firth, in a circular form, washes the coast of the stewartry, from the Nith to the Cree, a space of 45 miles; and along the shore of this estuary the coast is bold and rocky, the cliffs in some instances rising to a great height. The Glasgow and South Western railway work this county, running a line from Dumfries, via Dalbeattie and Castle Douglas, to New Galloway, with a branch line from Castle Douglas to Kirkcudbright. From Castle Douglas the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway runs to Newton Stewart, Stranraer and Portpatrick, which connects with the steamers for Ireland from Stranraer.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The shire, or stewartry, comprises 28 civil parishes, and 33 whole and part of 1 of ecclesiastical parishes; these latter being included in the presbytery and synod of Dumfries and the presbytery of Kirkcudbright (with a few in that of Wigtown), synod of Galloway. There are 2 royal burghs, Kirkcudbright and New Galloway, and 4 police burghs (Castle Douglas, Dalbeattie, Gatehouse and Maxwelltown). Kirkcudbright and New Galloway, in conjunction with Stranraer, Wigtown and Whithorn (in Wigtownshire), formerly sent one member to Parliament, but under the 'Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," these towns were included in the counties to which they belong. This county returns one representative. In 1915 the parliamentary constituency numbered 5,971.

NEW ABBEY is a parish and village, in the stewartry and poor combination of Kirkcudbright, and in the small debt court district of Dumfries; the village, situated near the mouth of the Nith, is 6 miles from Killywhan station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 80 miles south from Edinburgh, 12 north-east from Dalbeattie, 30 north-east from Kirkcudbright, and 7 south from Dumfries. The parish, which is bounded on the east by the Solway Firth, originally called Kirkinder, takes its modern name from the Cistercian abbey, founded here in the 13th century, by Devorgilla, daughter of Alan, Lord of Galloway, and wife of John Balliol, of Barnard Castle, co. Durham, the founders also of Balliol College, Oxford, and parents of John Balliol, King of Scotland. The ruins, which occupy an area of 240 by 150 feet, include the piers and arches of the church: the area being used as a burying ground. The extreme outer walls, or precincts, enclose about 14 acres. On the north and south lie the woods of Shambellie, and on the south Loch Kinder, and the dark braes of Criffel, the lofty hill of which rises to the height of 2,000 feet above the sea, from which it is a mile distant. Besides that of Kinder, there are two other lakes in the parish, namely, Lochend and Lochabber. The old parish kirk, built with part of the material of the abbey, stood on the north side of the ruins. The present parish church, built in 1876, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and about 1896 was redecorated at the expense of the congregation. On the Glen Hill, a continuation of the Criffel Range, is a monument, erected in commemoration of the battle of Waterloo, 18 June, 1815. It is 50 feet in height, enclosing a winding stair, and on the base is an inscription. The St. John's Lodge, No. 162, of Freemasons, New Abbey, and the Sweetheart Lodge of Oddfellows, also of New Abbey, hold monthly meetings here. Kinharvie House, the residence of the Duchess of Norfolk, and Shambellie House of William Stewart esq. are in this parish. The Duchess of Norfolk, Richard Alexander Oswald esq. D.L., J.P. and vice-lieut. of Ayrshire, and William Stewart esq. are the principal landowners. The parish of New Abbey comprises an area of 13,177 acres; rateable value, £3,347; population in 1901, 957 and in 1911, 742.

BEESWING is a small hamlet in the parish, about 6 miles north-west of New Abbey village, and 3 from Lochanhead station, on the Glasgow and South Western railway; it contains an United Free church.

CASTLE DOUGLAS is a quoad sacra parish, town and burgh of barony in the parish of Kelton, and poor combination and Commissary Court of Kirkcudbright, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western and Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railways, 90 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 18 west by south from Dumfries, 15 north-east from Gatehouse, and 10 north-north-east from Kirkcudbright. The town is situated on the road between Gatehouse and Dumfries, in a pleasant, fertile district, on the banks of the Carlingwark loch, and derives its chief importance from its weekly markets and extensive auction sales: it was originally a village, but in 1792 was erected by the proprietor, Sir William Douglas, into a burgh of barony, and is now governed by a Town Council. Castle Douglas and its vicinity appear to have been the arena in ancient times of many hostile encounters, when the ancient Douglasses dwelt in the castle of Threave, and were lords of the district; and on the west side of the town are remains of encampments and breastworks, thrown up against the castle: on the south-west bank of the loch is a spot termed the "gallows lot," or "plot," said to have been the place of execution in former times. Near the head of the lake lived, it is said, a black-smith named M'Kim, or M'Mm, and his sons, who, according to tradition, made the large cannon called "Mons Meg," shown at Edinburgh Castle, forged by them at Buchan Croft, near Carlingwark House. Threave House is the property of Edward Gordon esq. and the residence of Mrs. Gordon. The Town Hall, in St. Andrew street, is a building of red sandstone, erected at a cost of £1,300, and was enlarged in 1907; and here a police court is held on the first Tuesday in each month. The Diamond Jubilee Cottage Hospital in Academy street, erected by public donations, amounting to over £2,000, was opened in 1899 and is available for 12 patients. In the town are branches of the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Bank, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited; there is also a Savings Bank, established in 1840. Castle Douglas parish church, near Carlingwark loch, built in 1868, and enlarged in 1881, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and affords 720 sittings. The Episcopal church of St. Ninian, erected in 1874, is a building of whinstone and granite, in the Early English style, and will seat 150 persons. The United Free church in King street has a steeple of red sandstone. The principal public school, in Cotton street, is a building of red sandstone, erected in 1910 at a cost of £8,000. A market for cattle, sheep and grain is held on Mondays. Fairs: February 13th, or the following Monday, for horses; the last Monday in March, for hiring servants; September 23rd, or the following Monday, for hiring and for horses, and November 13th, or the following Monday, for horses. The population in 1911 was 3,016; rateable value, burghal, £18,881.

CROSSMICHAEL is a parish and village in the poor combination and small debts court district of Kirkcudbright, with a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway and is 5 miles north-east from Laurieston, 3½ north-west from Castle Douglas, 91 south-south-west from Edinburgh, 19 south-west from Dumfries and 6 south-south-east from New Galloway, pleasantly situated on the east banks of the Dee, which river is crossed, about a mile and a half from the village, by an elegant stone bridge, over which passes the high road leading to Laurieston. The parish lies nearly in the centre of the stewartry, having the Urr water on the east, and the Dee on the west. Two small lakes, which have an outlet to the latter river, furnish good perch and pike fishing. The parish church stands in the village, but of the cross from which the place derives its name there are now no remains. There is a hospital for infectious diseases, erected in 1904 for 21 patients, at a cost of £4,000. Greenlaw, in this parish, was formerly the residence of Robert, 4th Viscount Kenmure, who died in 1663 at the old fortress of Greenlaw, the remains of which still exist. Robert Gordon, son of William, 6th Viscount, who was beheaded on Tower Hill, 24th February, 1716, succeeded to the estate in 1737, and began the erection of the present house, which he had not completed at his death, 10th August, 1741. The estate of Greenlaw continued in the possession of the Gordons till 1880, when it was sold to John Ross Coulthart, of Ashton-under-Lyne, in the county of Lancaster, banker, but the present owner is John Ross Coulthart McGuffie esq. Besides the remains of the old fortalice of Greenlaw, there are also in the parish the foundations of a monastery. The Barony Isle of the river Dee is said to have been a consecrated spot, where the Druids had a temple in the midst of a grove of oaks. There is also a Roman burying-place, several Pictish cairns, in which human bones have been found; and British encampments, near which stone weapons of various descriptions have been discovered. Mollance is the residence of John Neilson esq. D.L., J.P. and Auchendolly, of Col. Archibald Hume D.L., J.P. John Rose Coulthart McGuffie esq. Sir G. W. Abercromby bart. Allen Rutherford Bell esq. Col. Archibald Hume D.L., J.P. the Misses Duncan and Mrs. Stewart are the principal landowners. The area is 9,934 acres; rateable value, landward, £12,286; burghal (Castle Douglas), £1,433; the population in 1911 was 1,196, of which 111 are in Castle Douglas town.

DALBEATTIE

DALBEATTIE is a town, burgh and quoad sacra parish, locally in the parish of Urr, post combination of Kirkcudbright and Castle Douglas small debt court district, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and is 87 miles south-south west from Edinburgh, 13½ north-by-east from Kirkcudbright, 13 south-west from Dumfries, and 6 east from Castle Douglas, on the Dalbeattie burn, a tributary of the Water of Urr, which is here navigable for vessels of 150 tons. The harbour, called Dub-o'-Hass, is about five miles from the Solway Firth. The harbour and river are now under the care of the Urr Navigation Trust. The burgh has communication by sea with the western ports, and by railway with many large inland towns, and has also several considerable falls of water, which are utilized for the working of various paper, bobbin and corn mills, and timber sawing works: in the neighbourhood are granite quarries. The government of the burgh is vested in a provost, two bailies and six councillors, who are elected by the ratepayers of the three wards into which the burgh is divided under the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862. A police court is held on the last Wednesday in each month. The town is lighted with gas. The Established church, in Craignair street, occupies a site presented by the late Mr. Maxwell, of Munches, and was built in 1879 at a cost of £3,876 (exclusive of the spire, erected by Mr. Maxwell), from the plans of Messrs. Kinnear and Peddie, architects, of Edinburgh, and opened 27th January, 1880. There are five stained windows in the apse, placed as memorials to Mr. Stewart, and the church affords about 850 sittings. The Congregational chapel (Mount Zion), was erected in 1866, and seats 370. The United Free church, Mill street, built in 1843, was rebuilt in 1882 in the Romanesque style, and affords 560 sittings. The United Free church, John street, was erected in 1861. Christ Church (Episcopalian) is a Mission church, erected in 1875, in the Early English style, and will seat 164 persons. St. Peter's Roman Catholic church, erected in 1814, is in Craignair street. There is an auction mart held every other Saturday for the sale of cattle and sheep. There are Conservative and Liberal clubs, and branches of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. About four miles north-east from Dalbeattie are the ruins of Corra Castle, formerly the residence of Lord Herries, but now the property of the Maxwells, of Terregles. Mary, Queen of Scots, it is said, passed a night here after the battle of Langside Moor, 13th May, 1568. Three miles north-west is the moat of Urr. William Jardine Herries Maxwell esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. Miss E. M. Copland and the trustees of the late John William Hutchison, esq. are the principal landowners. Rateable value of burgh, £11,025; population in 1911, 3,553.

DALRY (or ST. JOHN'S) is a parish and village on the east bank of the river Ken, bounded on the north-east by Dumfriesshire and south-east by the Garple Burn, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and small debt court district, 9 miles north from Parton and 8 miles north from New Galloway stations on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint line, 3¼ miles north of New Galloway, the same distance from Balmaclellan, and 24 north of Kirkcudbright. The southern portion of the district lies in a beautiful valley of rich arable land; the high grounds are pastoral, and graze considerable numbers of cattle and sheep. The village is surrounded with delightful scenery, and there is a good hotel (the Lochinvar). Water is supplied by gravitation. Here is an Established church and a United Free church. St. John's Public Hall was erected in 1858, at a cost of nearly £400, and enlarged and remodelled in 1887, at a cost of £700, and is used for public meetings, lectures &c.; there is also a Public Library, a golf course and a bowling green. In the churchyard is a stone erected to the memory of two Covenanters, with a long inscription in rhymed couplets. Fairs are held on the first Friday in July and in October. In the parish are several lakes; the largest, Lochinvar, covers an area of 50 acres, and within it stands the remains of an ancient castle, formerly belonging to the Gordons, Knights of Lochinvar, and subsequently, from 1633, Viscounts of Kenmure and Lords Lochinvar, but these titles became dormant on the death of Adam, 8th Viscount, 1 Sept. 1847. The Duke of Buccleuch, Charles William Forbes esq. John McTurk Alexander esq. Richard Alexander Oswald esq. D.L., J.P. Thomas McTurk esq. Col. John Murray Kennedy M.V.O., V.D., D.L., J.P. and the trustees of the late Augustus F. M. Spalding esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 34,503 acres; rateable value, £10,514; population in 1911, 807.

GATEHOUSE is a modern town and burgh of barony, partly in the parish of Anwoth, but chiefly in that of Girthon, and is 6 miles south-by-east from Dromore station on the Portpatrick branch of the Caledonian system, 8 north-west from Kirkcudbright terminal station, 8 west from Tarff station on a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 105 south-south-west from Edinburgh, 50 east of Portpatrick and 33 south-west from Dumfries. The town is charmingly seated at the head of Fleet Bay, in a romantic and fertile vale, embosomed by hills and lofty eminences, some of which are clothed with woods, interspersed with rich pasturage. The town is well and regularly built, the streets running in straight lines and crossing each other at right angles Gatehouse was erected into a burgh of barony in 1795, and is governed by a provost, magistrates and Town Council, under the "Town Councils (Scotland) Act, 1900." At the foot of the High street flows the river Fleet, which is here crossed by a good stone bridge, and at this point the river meets the tide, and becomes navigable for vessels of 60 tons burthen. The navigation was considerably improved by the late Mr. Murray, who, at a cost of £3,000, cut a canal in a straight line, which, besides deepening the river, reclaimed many acres of land, since which a commodious quay has been constructed. The exports of Gatehouse are principally grain, timber, and wood, and its imports lime and coal. There are some saw mills propelled by water power. Mines of lead and copper were some years since wrought to advantage, and specimens of copper from the Enrick mine, shown at the London Exhibition of 1851, were then pronounced to be the richest in Europe; the copper mine at Enrick and another near Drumruck have been recently worked, but without much success. In High street stands a square tower of grey granite 75 feet high, which had its origin in a sum of £30, left by Andrew Findlay watch maker, in 1867, for the purpose of erecting a public clock; the tower was erected in 1871, at a cost of £300, raised by public subscription, and the fine clock was presented to the town by the late H G. Murray-Stewart esq. D.L., J.P. at a cost of £160. The public hall, in High street, built at a cost of £1,400, contains a fine oil painting, by the late John Faed R.S.A. of Ardmore. The parish church of Girthon, erected in 1817, in place of an ancient church at the "Clachan of Girthon, now in ruins, was greatly improved, and a new tower erected in 1896, at a cost of more than £1,000. There is also a Roman Catholic church, a masonic lodge, a library, and a reading room. On a hill near the town stands a plain monument or column of stone, erected to Samuel Rutherford, an eminent Scotch divine for some years minister of Anwoth. The column, which overlooks the church where he preached, was struck and thrown down by lightning in 1847, but rebuilt soon after. The chief hotel is the Murray Arms, in which it is said Burns wrote the well-known "Scots wha hae." The market day is on Saturday, the cattle markets on the second Saturday, monthly; and the fairs are held on the Saturday before the 29th of June and the last Saturday in September. The population in 1911 was 1,032; rateable value, £3,513.

(1826), John Faed R.S.A. (1820) and James Faed, the well-known artists. There are traces of three Roman encampments in the parish of Girthon. Cally, the only mansion in the parish, is the property of the trustees of the late Col. J. W. Murray Baillie, who are lords of the manor, and is now (1915) unoccupied. The area is 33,369 acres; rateable value, landward, £6,932; burghal (Gatehouse), £2,475; the population in 1911 was 1,174; of this number 746 were in the town of Gatehouse.

KELLS is a parish, in the poor combination of Kirkcudbright and small debts court district of Kirkcudbright, and contains the town and railway station of New Galloway (which see); the parish is bounded east by the Ken water, north by Dalmaddy burn, and west and south-west by the river Dee. Loch Ken, which adjoins the town, is 4½ miles long and in many places more than a mile broad, and abounds with pike and perch. The parish church, built in 1822, and serving also for New Galloway, is an edifice of stone with a square central tower. In the churchyard is an ancient tomb-stone carved with the arms of the Coultharts and Macturks, and a monument to a covenanter. The ancient castle of Kenmure, which stands a short distance south, was once a place of considerable strength, and here it is said Mary Queen of Scots lodged one night, on her way from this country to England. KIRKBEAN is a small parish and village, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and in the small debt court district of Dumfries; the village, situated in the northern part of the parish, about a mile from the sea, is 10 miles from Southwick (the nearest) station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 4½ south of New Abbey and 12 south-east from Dumfries. The parish is bounded on east and south by the Solway Firth. This little place possesses some notoriety, if not distinction, from having been the birthplace of John Paul Jones, a "sea adventurer," and a commodore in the United States navy, who was born 6 July, 1747, and was the son of the gardener at Arbigland; from 1775 to 1779, as captain of the "Providence," he did much damage to English shipping, and died at Paris, 15 July, 1792. The conspicuous mountain called Criffel stands partly within the parish and partly within that of New Abbey; there are also slight traces of the castles of Cavens and Wreath, both of which were the property and occasional residence of James, 4th Earl of Morton and Regent of Scotland, 1572-8. Southerness is a small village situated at the extreme point of the coast, which runs to the Solway Firth, and is resorted to for bathing purposes. On the point is a lighthouse. Carsethorn and Preston Mill are small hamlets also in this parish, both about a mile distant from the village of Kirkbean; the former is a favourite resort for bathers during the season. Richard Alexander Oswald esq. D.L., J.P. and the trustees of the late Capt. William Burdett Blackett, who was killed at Ypres in November, 1914, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 8,938; rateable value, £7,030; population in 1911, 711 in the civil parish and 677 in the ecclesiastical parish.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT

KIRKCUDBRIGHT (G. Circ Cudbricht, Cuthbert's kirk) is a royal burgh, the capital of the stewartry, a parish and the head of a poor house combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 100 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 55 east from Portpatrick, and 28 south-south-west from Dumfries. The town occupies a peninsula on the east side of the Dee, about 6 miles from the confluence of that river with the Solway Firth, and is of considerable antiquity; it is regularly built, and consists of six or seven distinct streets, at right angles with each other, and the houses have a respectable and comfortable appearance. The harbour is the best in the south; at the ordinary spring tides the depth of water is 30 feet, and at the lowest neap tides 18 feet. The river is navigable for two miles above the town, to the Tongland bridge, designed by Thomas Telford, the famous engineer, and consisting of a single arch of 110 feet span. The iron bridge, erected across the Dee here during the period 1865-8 at a cost of £10,000, and opened 8 July, 1868, is of the bowstring lattice construction, and is 500 feet long by 23 feet broad, consisting of five fixed spans of 71 feet each, and a compound span of 98 feet, which latter turns on a cast iron cylinder filled with concrete, to allow of the passage of vessels of considerable burthen; on the parapets is a reproduction of the burgh seal, together with the names of persons concerned in the erection of the bridge. A small fort erected here by the lords of Galloway was afterwards superseded by a castle belonging to the Crown, and governed, with the town, by a constable. During the lordship of the Douglases in Galloway, Kirkcudbright became a burgh of regality under their influence, and on the forfeiture of their rights, James II. erected the town into a royal burgh by charter dated at Perth, 26 h October, 1455. This grant was renewed and confirmed by Charles I. 20 July, 1633, and the burgh has since been under the government of a provost, two bailies, and fourteen councillors, with a treasurer and chamberlain; together with Dumfries, Annan, Sanquhar and Lochmaben it forms the Dumfries Parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The Sheriff Court House, erected, at a cost of £8,583, on the site of the old Stewartry building, under the Sheriff Court House Act, is a castellated structure with a tower in the centre; the old tower now stands in rear of the new building. On the ground floor are the offices of the procurator fiscal, the county clerk's office, and police office; the second storey contains the court room, seated for 150 persons, sheriff clerk's, sheriff substitute's and Justice of Peace clerk's chambers, faculty, library &c. From the old tower an extensive view is obtained of the beautiful environs of the town, including the ruins of the castle of Kirkcudbright, built about 1584 by Sir Robert Maclellan K.T. 1st Baron Kirkcudbright, a title which became dormant or extinct on the death of the 9th baron, 19 April, 1832. The former gaol and court house is an ancient and curious building, supposed to date from about the middle of the 16th century, and has a market cross on the outside stair leading to the tower. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The Royal, Commercial and the Selkirk Arms are the principal hotels. The Established church, erected in 1838, is a building of stone, consisting of nave, transepts and a tower with spire, standing in the centre of a plantation, through which are public walks, and will seat 1,500 persons. A portion of the former church, erected in 1730, still remains, but is now used as a school. It contains a monument with recumbent effigy in fine preservation, to one of the Barons Kirkcudbright. The Church Hall was erected in 1891 at a cost of over £2,000. The Episcopal church of St. Cuthbert is a building of iron, erected in 1880 at a cost of £200, and containing nave, chancel, porch and vestry, and will seat 100 persons. St. Mary's United Free church, erected in 1872-3 on the former site, at a cost of over £5,000, is a building of whinstone, with red sandstone facings, in the Gothic style, with good traceried windows, and has a square tower, with spire reaching a height of 122 feet; there are sittings for 712 persons: attached to the church are a number of halls and various offices, the total cost of the whole being £7,000. The United Free church, in St. Cuthbert street, opened in 1880, at a cost of £1,300, will seat 400 persons. The Roman Catholic church of St. Cuthbert is in High street, behind the County buildings. The Johnston Free school is a building of stone, consisting of a central block, with wings and a tower. The Town Hall, erected in 1879, at a cost of £5,300, is a building of freestone in the Classic style, and contains a library, reading room and lecture hall. The Academy, re-organised in 1893, is now carried on as a higher class school, and recognised as the junior student centre for the stewartry; the building was remodelled in 1901 at a cost of £2 000 for the purpose of giving instruction in applied science. William Bruce M.A. rector. The Museum was erected in 1892, at a cost of £1,550. The market day is Friday. St. Mary's Isle, a beautiful spot, a mile from the town, and formerly the seat of the late Earl of Selkirk, is now the residence of Captain Charles Dunbar Hope D.L., J.P. Balmae is the residence of the Countess of Selkirk. Captain Charles Dunbar Hope and the town council of the burgh are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 12,280 acres; rateable value, landward, £11,556; burghal, £10,894; population in 1911, parish 3,116, burgh 2,205.

KIRKPATRICK-IRONGRAY is a parish with a station on the Dumfries and Moniaive Cairn Valley light railway, and is bounded on the north by the river Cairn or Clouden, which separates it from the parish of Holywood, in Dumfriesshire, on the east by Terregles, on the west by Kirkpatrick-Durham and Urr, and on the south by Lochrutton, and in the small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, occasional courts being held at Maxwelltown. Here are Established and United Free churches. In the churchyard is a monumental sarcophagus of Craigleith sandstone, erected by Sir Walter Scott bart. to Helen Walker, the prototype of Jeanie Deans, the heroine of the "Heart of Midlothian," who was a native of this parish, and whose remains are interred here; there is also a tombstone near the church to two martyrs, who were hanged for their religion, and on Skeoch hill is a granite monument, erected to commemorate the celebration of the communion by 3,000 Presbyterians, who objected to Episcopacy. The parish contains the village of Shawhead, which is about 7 miles west from Dumfries. Richard Alexander Oswald esq. D.L., J.P. the trustees of the late Samuel Adamson esq. the trustees of the late James E. Blair esq. Maxwell Hyslop Maxwell esq J.P. V.D. and S. Williamson Wallace esq are the principal landowners. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, gravel. Chief crops are oats, roots and turnips. The area is 13,655 acres; rateable value, £9,342; in 1911 the population was 594.

MAXWELLTOWN, which forms part of the parliamentary burgh of Dumfries, is a burgh of barony and town in the parish of Troqueer, in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and is divided from Dumfries town by the river Nith, over which are three bridges, one of which is an ancient structure coeval with the Franciscan Monastery, to which its bridge tolls once belonged. The observatory and the gaol are both in this suburb. Full particulars and lists of residents are given with Dumfries, Dumfriesshire.

MINNIGAFF is a large parish, in the western part of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, 17 miles in length by 11 in breadth; it is bounded on the north by the county of Ayr and the parish of Carsphairn, on the north-east by Kells, south-east by Girthon and Kirkmabreck, and on the west by the river Cree, over which there is a bridge uniting it to the parish of Penninghame and the town of Newton Stewart. The parish is in the small debt court district of Castle Douglas, and has a station at Palnure, 3 miles south-east from Cree Bridge, on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint railway. There are Established and United Free churches. In the lower parts the land has been a good deal improved, especially towards the margin of the Cree, which is navigable for several miles and produces excellent fish of various kinds, including an abundance of salmon. The major portion of the parish is devoted to pasturage, and sustains large flocks of sheep and numerous herds of black cattle. The parish includes part of the town of Newton Stewart, Wigtownshire. Kirroughtree, the seat of Arthur C. Armitage esq. D.L., J.P. within a mile of Newton Stewart, but in the parish of Minnigaff, is beautifully situated on the side of a hill, surrounded by fine woods, and intersected by pleasant winding paths. Cumloden is the seat of the Earl of Galloway. Palnure is a village with a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway, and a small quay, near the confluence of the Palnure burn with the river Cree, 3 miles south-east from Newton Stewart and 4 north-west from Creetown. The area comprises 87,922 acres; the population in 1911 was 1,202.

PRESTON MILL, see KIRKBEAN.

RERRICK is a parish on the Solway Firth, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and is 6 miles south-east from Kirkcudbright (the nearest) station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The abbey church, many of the piers and arches of which are still standing, was a cruciform building with a central tower and spire rising to a height of 200 feet. The nave and choir were 120 feet in length, and on the south side of the church were the cloisters, enclosing a garth. The abbey afforded a temporary shelter to Mary Stuart during the last hours she spent in Scotland, after the defeat at Langside, 13 May, 1568, and previous to her embarkation for England. She arrived here in the evening, and spent her last night within the walls of the monastery. The spot where she took boat next morning for the English side of the Solway is at Burnfoot, the nearest point to the coast, situated in a little creek and surrounded by vast and precipitous rocks. Dundrennan is a small village in this parish, 6 miles south-west from Kirkcudbright station. The ruined Abbey of Dundrennan, the remains of which stand about a mile and a half from the sea, was founded by Fergus, Lord of Galloway, in the year 1142. John M'Dowall esq. J.P. William Brown esq. Miss Ella Cutlar Ferguson and David Maitland esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 20,005 acres; rateable value, £15,304; population, 1911, 1293.

HESTON ISLAND, on which is a lighthouse, is in this parish.

TERREGLES is a parish near the confluence of the rivers Nith and Cluden and 2½ miles west of Dumfries, in the small debt court of Kirkcudbright, occasional courts being held at Maxwelltown. The Maxwell Memorial Hall here, the gift of Mrs. Lloyd as a memorial to her late husband, was erected in 1906.

The abbey of Lincluden, the ruins of which occupy an elevated and sequestered site about a mile from Dumfries, was founded about the middle of the 12th century by Uchtred, eldest son of Fergus, Earl and Lord of Galloway, for nuns of the Benedictine order, and is assumed to have been colonised from the monasteries of Clugny or Marmoutier in France. The spot was anciently known as "Tir-eglwys" (Terra Ecclesia) now corrupted into 'Terregles," but the name "Lincluden" signifies the "linn" or "pot" of the Cluden, a tributary of the Nith. In the autumn of 1174, Uchtred, the founder, was surprised in his castle at Loch Fergus by his brother Gilbert, and after being inhumanly tortured was put to death, but his mutilated remains, according to tradition, were interred within the abbey. In 1296, Alianore, prioress of Lincluden, did homage at Berwick-on-Tweed to Edward I. but in the 14th century, Galloway became the possession of Archibald, 3rd Earl of Douglas, and the abbey was shortly thereupon suppressed, the sisterhood expelled, and its endowments appropriated by this powerful chieftain, and the last prioress, Blanche, is believed to have died in 1440 at Dundrennan Abbey, where her tomb still remains. The Earl subsequently refounded the institution as a college for 12 canons and a provost, and erected new buildings, including a fine church, and he appears also to have liberally endowed his foundation, afterwards enlarged so as to consist of 8 prebendaries, 24 bedesmen and a chaplain; he died at Thrieve Castle, 3 Feb. 1400-1. Archibald, his son, 2nd Earl of Douglas and Duke of Touraine, married the Princess Margaret, daughter of King Robert III.: she died in 1440 and was buried with great pomp in the collegiate church, where her splendid tomb, though much mutilated, still remains. The college was eventually dissolved about 1565, Robert Douglas, the last provost, being pensioned, and the secularization of the college property was completed by the Annexation Act of 1587. The estates were subsequently granted to the Murrays of Lochmaben and to the Maxwells of Carlaverock Earls of Nithsdale, now represented by the Duchess of Norfolk. Of the original abbey, scarcely more than traces of its foundations now remain, but of the collegiate buildings, considerable portions are still standing, and include the choir of the church with the sacristy and provost's lodging on the north which formed part of the east side of a quadrangle adjoining the church on the north; there also remains the south aisle of the nave, with a transeptal chapel. The vaulting of the choir, entire in 1775, fell in at the beginning of the present century, and in 1851, a heptagonal tower, which stood south-west of the church, also fell, and the buildings were left to decay until, in 1882, Capt. Alfred Constable-Maxwell, the late owner of the Terregles estate, repaired the fabric generally at very considerable expense, and erected a cottage for the residence of a caretaker. During the process of clearing and excavating the site, various relics of much interest were recovered, including a portion of the panelled rood screen, with figures, the coffin slab of Alexander de Carnys, provost, c. 1410-13, and others. The splendid tomb of the Princess Margaret, highly enriched with carved shields of arms and ornamental work, remains on the north side of the choir, and during the work of renovation the recumbent effigy which once lay within it was recovered, though in a much mutilated condition; on the south side of the choir are sedilia and a piscina, and the interior of the church generally is much ornamented with heraldic shields and carved foliage. In later days, Lincluden was a favourite resort of the poet Burns, and beside its ruined walls he composed several of his pieces, including the "Vision of Liberty." Terregles House is the property of Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stuart esq. D.L., J.P. who is the principal landowner, and is occupied by Charles Edward Galbraith esq. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, roots and potatoes. The area is 3,828 acres; rateable value: landward, £5,799 12s. 9d.; burghal (Maxwelltown), £189; population in 1911, 439.

URR is a parish, a little to the north-east of Castle Douglas, in the Kirkcudbright poor combination, and is bounded on the north-east by the parish of Lochrutton, north by Kirkpatrick-Irongray and north-west by Kirkpatrick-Durham, and contains the town of Dalbeattie (which see).

HAUGH-OF-URR is a picturesque village on the east bank of the Water of Urr, and about 3½ miles north-east from Dalbeattie station on the Kirkcudbright branch of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. In the neighbourhood is a waterfall called Spottes Lynn, a ferruginous well, and a romantic glen, interesting both to the botanist and geologist. On the bank of the river, about a mile from the village, is the Moat of Urr, an artificial mound, surrounded by elevated circles and supposed to have been used in primitive times as a place for public meetings. The Established church is a building of red freestone, erected on the site of an earlier church dating from 1815. Here is a hall used for entertainments and a library.

CROCKETFORD (or Nine Mile Bar), a small village about 3 miles north-east from Kirkpatrick-Durham, on the road from Dumfries, was begun towards the close of the last century by a sect known as the Buchanites, so called from their foundress and leader, Mrs. Elspeth Buchan, who established the sect about 1779, but died in May, 1791, when her followers were dispersed.

HARDGATE is a small village, half a mile from Haugh, and has a United Free church.

SPRINGHOLM is a small village one mile east from Kirkpatrick-Durham, on the road from Dumfries. In the neighbourhood is a woollen manufactory.

James Laurie M'Kie Hutchison esq. John Gordon Birney esq. and William Jardine Herries Maxwell esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners.

The area comprises 15,429 acres; rateable value, landward, £12,699; burgh, £9,084; the population in 1911 was 4,536, with 3,357 in Dalbeattie burgh.

LANARKSHIRE

A POPULOUS county situated south of a line drawn from the Firth of Clyde to the Firth of Forth, and containing in its northern, or Lower ward, the City of Glasgow. At an early period this extensive district was, for convenience, divided into two wards, called the Over Ward and Nether Ward, Lanark being the chief town and seat of justice of the former, and Rutherglen of the latter; this arrangement was altered during the last century, when the county was divided into three wards, namely, the Upper, the Nether or Lower, and the Middle Wards, the chief towns being Glasgow, Lanark and Hamilton. The central part of the county throughout is termed Clydesdale, or the Vale of Clyde, from being the basin of that beautiful river. In the reign of James I. a portion of the county was made into the county of Renfrew. The three wards roughly correspond to the differences in the conformation of the country, as commencing from the south of the county the hilly portion may be said to correspond with the Upper Ward; the plain country with the Middle; the Lower or Northern Ward being the smallest, though having the largest population, as it includes the City of Glasgow. The county is bounded south by Dumfriesshire, west by Ayr and Renfrew, north by Stirling, east by Linlithgow, Edinburghshire and Peebles. Its extreme length (from south-south-east to north-north-west) is somewhat more than 50 miles, and its greatest breadth in the middle (from east to west) is about 34 miles; it includes within its area 8,794 square miles, 562,821 acres of land (of which 12,666 acres are in Glasgow City) and 4,170 of water. In 1891 the population of the county was 1,105,899. By Boundary Orders Nos. 137 and 140, under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict.), that portion of the burgh of Glasgow which up to 1891 was included in the county of Renfrew was transferred to Lanarkshire; the population in 1901 was 1,339,327. The population in 1911 was 1,444,034, including 784,496 in Glasgow City; males, 721,369, of which 381,304 were in Glasgow City, and females, 725,369, including 403,182 in Glasgow City. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 266,671; uninhabited, 11,862; building, 3,414. In 1911 the inhabited houses were 293,371, of which 163,057 were in Glasgow; uninhabited, 30,056, 20,903 in Glasgow, and building, 1,163, 487 being in Glasgow. In size Lanark is the tenth of the Scottish counties, and in population the first. Population in 1911, 1,447,113.

Early History.—Held by the Strathclyde Britons, it was in 79 overrun by the Romans, who built their wall between the Clyde and Forth just north of this county; in 410 the Britons resumed possession, but were ousted by the Irish Scots, who in their turn gave way to the Northumbrians. Throughout the arduous struggle for Scottish independence, Lanarkshire was the theatre of many military excesses. At a subsequent date the turbulence of the Douglases, with the intrigues of the first Lord Hamilton, involved Lanarkshire in the various calamities consequent upon intestine warfare; it subsequently became subject to a thirty years' civil commotion, stimulated by the prosecution of the more zealous Presbyterians of this district by Charles I.

Soil, Produce, Manufactures, Climate &c.—The upper division of the county is very mountainous; from Tinto, looking northwards, the face of the country shows only gentle elevations. The Upper Ward, which may be deemed three-fifths of the county, is mostly hilly and moorish; the Middle Ward, though esteemed a good agricultural district, is nearly one-third moss land. The Lower Ward is of very limited extent. The commencement of improvement in soil and cultivation in this part of Scotland was not apparent until about the middle or nearer the end of the 18th century; from this period draining, planting and inclosing took place.

The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1914," are:—Oats, 35,443 acres; wheat, 2,269; rye, 24; beans (to be harvested as corn), 101; total of corn crops, 37,837 acres; turnips and swedes, 9,489 acres; potatoes, 5,592; cabbage, 687; mangolds, 24; rape, 1,244; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. (for fodder), 447; total of green crops, 17,483 acres; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 32,930 acres; pasture (not for hay), 32,351 acres; strawberries, 1,397 acres; raspberries, 68 acres; currants and gooseberries, 554 acres; others, including mixed areas, 73 acres; apples, 117 acres; plums, 111 acres; others including mixed areas, 264 acres; bare fallow, 367 acres. The total area of land is 564,567 acres, of which 214,820 acres was mountain and heath land (used for grazing); permanent grass, 126,374 acres; 123,701 acres arable land and 20,727 acres woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1914 comprised:—Horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 5,822; stallions, 69; unbroken horses, one year and above, 1,263; under one year, 586; other horses, 1,517; cows in milk, 29,591; cows in calf, but not in milk, 6,857; heifers in calf, 4,640; other cattle, two years and above, 8,973; one year and under two, 11,677; under one year, 12,341; ewes kept for breeding, 99,733; other sheep, one year and above, 38,639; under one year, 98,150; sows kept for breeding, 1,202; other pigs, 7,822.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 290; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 435; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 299; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 250; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 333; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 377; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 464; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 417; above 300 acres, 76; total, 2,941.

Some flax is grown, which is spun by females, who dispose of the yarn in the markets of Lanark, Biggar, Carnwath and other places. In the neighbourhood of Carluke strawberries are also grown in abundance. The inhabitants of the inland and upland districts rear great numbers of black cattle and sheep, and the Clydesdale breed of horses is of a useful character. The climate, although varying considerably in different situations in the low-lying districts, in the vicinity of the Clyde is mild and temperate; but in the uplands in the south-south-west, and south-east the weather is more severe. In mineral productions Lanarkshire is, perhaps, the richest in Scotland. Gold, to an important amount, was, at an early period found in this county, and in later days, on the sides of a rivulet called the Wenlock, small pieces of that precious metal, in a pure state, have been picked up from among the sand and soil brought down by the torrents from the precipices and slopes of the mountains; particles of gold have also been found in Crawford Muir, with some large pieces of lapis lazuli. At present supplies of lead may be had in the parish of Crawford; and coal, ironstone, limestone, freestone, sandstone, whinstone, fire-clay and a variety of other metallic, mineral and fossil substances are to be obtained abundantly in different districts of the county. The lead mines belonging to the Earl of Hopetoun, at Leadhills, afford employment to a large number of workmen. Owing to the discovery of large quantities of bituminous shale, the manufacture of paraffin oil has been extending very rapidly in the neighbourhood of Airdrie, Lanark and other places.

In 1913, 17,486,267 tons of coal, valued at £8,748,272, was raised in Lanarkshire; 357,827 tons of fire-clay, value £71,134; brick clay, 140,861 tons, value £9,495. In 1913, 280,992 tons of coke was made at gas works and 232,294 tons at coke ovens, in the manufacture of which 1,214,211 tons of coal was used; lead ore, 1,331 tons, which gave 1,049 tons of lead and 4,658 ounces of silver.

The number of mines under the "Coal Mines Act" in 1913 was 214.

The number of persons employed in the collieries in 1913 was: underground, 47,988, and above ground, 11,747.

The total number employed in 1913 in all mines and quarries was: underground, 49,003; above ground, 12,130; total, 61,133.

There are 10 iron works in the county, containing 67 blast furnaces, of which an average of 57 were in work in 1913, producing (with the four furnaces of the Carron Co. at Carron, Stirlingshire) 960,419 tons of pig iron. The total iron ore used in the manufacture was 1,991,583 tons, and coal (including coal converted into coke), 1,797,338 tons.

There is also a large production of oil shale, the quantity raised in 1913 being 61,408 tons. The quantity of stone raised in the same time was 29,960 tons of limestone and 109,272 tons of sandstone; gravel and sand was raised to the extent of 178,031 tons; igneous rocks, 189,549 tons.

The fishing industry is small, the number of boats registered on Dec. 31st, 1913, at Greenock being 116, of 279 tons, and Glasgow 17, of 932, requiring 300 men and boys to work them at the two places; of other vessels the number registered was, at Glasgow, 1,683, with an aggregate tonnage of 2,125,197, and Greenock, 195, of 248,827 tons.

The number of vessels built at Glasgow in 1913 was 130, net tonnage 200,664, and at Greenock, 27, 59,840 net tonnage. In addition 46 vessels, of 43,912 tons, were built at Glasgow for foreigners.

The cotton goods, for which Glasgow is the market, are to a very considerable extent woven in different villages and parishes in the county, and this branch of manufacture supports a large proportion of the dense population; and there are extensive works in several places in the shire for the manufacture of pig and malleable iron and steel tubes and boilers, besides which there are large engineering, brick, tile and terra cotta, paper, and many and various other kinds of works.

Rivers, Mountains and Railways.—The principal river is the Clyde, which rises on the north of the watershed which separates Lanarkshire from the counties of Peebles and Dumfries. The chief tributaries are the Powtrail water, the Crook burn, and the Even and Elvan waters, Glengonar water and the Duneaton water. The Clyde flows in a longitudinal direction, in a winding course of more than 60 miles, dividing the county into two nearly equal parts, and ultimately falls into the Firth of Clyde opposite the Isle of Bute. It ranks amongst the largest rivers of Scotland, and is navigable for vessels of 1,000 tons as far as the City of Glasgow. The most prominent of the secondary rivers within the shire are the Douglas water, the Mouse, the Nethan, the Avon, the Calder, the North Calder and the Kelvin. There are other streams of less magnitude, as the Elwin, the Little Clyde, the Cotten and the Logan. The greatest elevations of this county, with their altitude above the level of the sea, are:—The Lowther Hills, 2,403 feet; Tinto, 2,335; Culter Fell, 2,454; Wintercleugh Fell, 1,804; Goodbush, 1,556; Dungavel, 1,502; Hagshaw, 1,540, and Hawkswood, 1,251. The railways consist of the main line of the Caledonian line which enters the county in the south-east and passing by Symington, where a branch goes off east to Biggar and Carstairs Junction, proceeds to Glasgow through Motherwell; at Carstairs Junction one branch goes north-east to Edinburgh, with a short branch from Auchengray to Wilsonstown, and another to Dolphinston, a third proceeding south-west to Muirkirk, on the way to which it connects at Douglas with a line running through Lesmahagow and Ayr road—whence a branch goes to Stonehouse—to Hamilton, which is the centre for lines to Strathavon, East Kilbride and Pollokshaws on the west and Uddingston to the north; this latter line being continued through Shettleston to Glasgow; from the Muirkirk section is a short line to Lanark; from Motherwell, on the main line, a branch runs through Coatbridge and Gartsherrie to the north of Glasgow, and another from Law Junction to Airdrie. The Caledonian Company have also a line through Coatbridge to Stirling and the north. From Strathavon a line is now (1907) in course of construction to Newmills and Troon, and from the same town to Lesmahagow. The North British enters the county a little west of Slamannan, and proceeds through Coatbridge and Airdrie (North) to Glasgow; also from Bathgate, through Caldercruix and Airdrie (South), to Coatbridge and Glasgow, and the same railway comes in at Lenzie Junction, and it works the Glasgow City and District railway to and from Maryhill, and has a line from Glasgow to Uddingston and thence to Hamilton. The Forth and Clyde Navigation canal and the Glasgow Union canal both pass through the northern divisions of the county.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Lanarkshire comprises (including the city parishes of Glasgow) 41 civil parishes and 86 entire and parts of 11 ecclesiastical parishes in the county, and 69 entire and 13 parts of ecclesiastical parishes in Glasgow city, which are included in the Presbyteries of Hamilton, Lanark and Glasgow, in the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The county contains three royal burghs, Glasgow, Lanark and Rutherglen; four municipal burghs, Airdrie, Coatbridge (with the privilege of a royal burgh), Hamilton and Rutherglen, and five police burghs, Biggar, Govan, Motherwell, Partick and Wishaw. Previous to the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," the county returned two representatives to the Imperial Parliament, but on the passing of that measure was apportioned into six divisions, and was given four additional members. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was:—Govan division, 22,559; Mid division, 21,243; North-East division, 28,759; North-West division, 24,998; Partick division, 29,536; South division, 11,666. Glasgow, which up to 1885 had sent but two members, was also separated into seven divisions, with the privilege of electing one representative for each. The royal burgh of Lanark, in conjunction with Hamilton and Airdrie in this county, Linlithgow, in the county of that name, and Falkirk, in Stirlingshire, comprising the Falkirk district of burghs, also contribute another member.

AIRDRIE

AIRDRIE is a market and post town and a burgh of barony, in the Middle ward, and a quoad sacra parish formed from the parish of New Monkland and including the villages of Clarkston, Rawyards and Drumgeloch. The town has stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, and is 18 miles north-north-east from Lanark, 32 west from Edinburgh and 11 east from Glasgow. The Monkland canal runs within a mile and a half from the town, which is regularly built and consists of several principal streets with smaller streets diverging from them; it is lighted with gas and electricity, and well supplied with good water by a public trust. The burgh is governed by a council consisting of a provost, four bailies, and ten councillors, with a treasurer and town clerk; and together with Falkirk, Hamilton, Lanark and Linlithgow forms the Falkirk parliamentary district, constituted by the Reform Act of 1832 and returning one member. The Municipal Building has a tower and contains a clock. The County Buildings are used for the sheriff court, held on Tuesday and Friday, and for the justice of the peace court, held on Monday and Thursday. The offices of the sheriff clerk, the clerk of the peace, the procurator fiscal and the superintendent of the county police are also in the building. The New Monkland parish council chambers, in North Bridge street, were erected at a cost of about £2,000. There are Established, United Free, Reformed Presbyterian, Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches. The Free Public Library, in Anderson street, erected at a cost of over £3,000, from the designs of the late G. Arthur, architect, of Airdrie, is an edifice in the Classic style, with Roman Doric pilasters, and contains general and ladies' reading rooms, library, lecture room and museum. The Sir John Wilson Town Hall, erected in 1912, at a cost of £14,000, was presented to the town by Sir John Wilson bart. D.L., J.P. The Public Park was the gift of the successive proprietors of Airdrie estate: the land required for the original formation was the gift of Alexander John Alexander esq. the owner of Airdrie estate. The original Airdrie Academy, situate on the south side of the town, is now utilised as an elementary public school, and has been re-named the Alexandra Public School. The old school was erected in 1848, at the sole expense of the then proprietor of Airdrie estate, Mr. A. J. Alexander, at a cost of upwards of £2,500. It was acquired by the School Board after the passing of the 1872 Education Act, and was enlarged in 1887. It was soon found, however, to be inadequate for the needs of the district, and accordingly the Board erected, at a cost of £8,000, a new school at Mavisbank, which was used for some years as a secondary school. This building in time proved insufficient for the growing needs of higher education, and in 1908 the School Board opened a new higher grade school, at a cost of over £13,000. The old building is now used for supplementary classes. Amongst the chief industries may be mentioned the extensive boiler and engineering works of Messrs. G. Ingls and Co. Limited, and the sanitary engineering works and brass foundry of John Spence and Sons; there are also other firms engaged in various branches of engineering and iron and brass founding, besides an extensive cotton mill, railway waggon works, and several coal pits. Hand-loom weaving, which at one time occupied a large number of hands, is now almost extinguished owing to the introduction of steam power. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the British Linen Bank, as well as a savings bank. The "Royal" is the principal commercial hotel and posting house in the district, and here all the principal local clubs and associations hold their meetings. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in May and the third Tuesday in November. The local newspapers are the "Airdrie and Coatbridge Advertiser" and the "Coatbridge Express," printed and published here weekly by Messrs. Baird and Hamilton Limited. Airdrie House is the residence of Thomas D. Wilson esq. and Cairnhill, of A. K. McCosh esq. J.P. The area of the municipal burgh is 1,049 acres; rateable value, £95,391; population in 1901, 20,288 and in 1911, 24,388. The population of the wards in 1911 was:—First, 5,437; Second, 4,799; Third, 5,527; Fourth, 4,831; Fifth, 3,796. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:—Airdrie, 13,190; Clarkston, 5,031; Flowerhill, 5,411. The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 17,288. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1914-15, 3,004, and on the municipal register, 4,959.

AVONDALE is a parish and village in the Middle ward and in Hamilton small debt court district, and contains the town of Strathaven; it is bounded on the east by the Kype water, on the south by Ayrshire, on the south-west by the Avon water, which flows through the centre of the parish, and on the north-west by East Kilbride. The battlefield of Drumclog (1 June, 1679) is in this parish. The reservoirs for the supply of the Middle ward of the county with water, begun in 1896, were completed at a cost of more than £250,000; the water is of excellent quality. The district, the air of which is pure and salubrious, is recommended by many medical men as a summer resort. The Duke of Hamilton is the principal landowner. The area is 37,570 acres; rateable value, £58,727; population in 1911, 5,033, including 3,494 in Strathaven Town.

BENHAR, see SHOTTS.

BIGGAR is a small town and burgh of barony, and parish, in the Upper ward, Peebles poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Lanark; the town, situated on the road between Peebles and Lanark, has a station on the Symington and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway, opened in 1858-9, and is 28 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 32 south-east from Glasgow, 16 west from Peebles, and 12½ south-east from Lanark. It consists principally of one spacious main street and was created a baronial burgh by charter of James II. to Sir Robert Fleming, of Biggar, created Lord Fleming, c. 1445; it is governed by a town council, and is lighted with gas by a company formed in 1839, and well supplied with pure water, conveyed from a source five miles distant. The parish is bounded on the east by Peeblesshire, west by the parish of Libberton, and north by Walston. The parish church is an ancient cruciform structure, in the Gothic style, enlarged and endowed in 1545, by one of the Flemings, lords of Biggar and Cumbernauld, as a collegiate church for a provost, eight prebends, four singing boys and six poor men, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary: the nave was probably built in the 12th or 13th century. There are also two United Free churches, a Corn Exchange and a Public Library. The weekly market is held on Monday, and fairs in February and November, also on the eleventh day from the last Thursday in October (old style) and one on the last Thursday in July. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. In this parish there are some remains of Boghall Castle, once the feudal stronghold of the Fleming family, and the principal residence of the successive lords, until early in the 17th century, when John, 6th Lord Fleming, was advanced, 19 March, 1605-6, to the revived dignity of Earl of Wigtoun, a title which ceased on the death of Charles 7th Earl, but is perhaps only dormant. Its next possessors were the Elphinstones, through whose neglect it fell into decay. At a comparatively recent date its walls were pulled down, and the materials carried off to form drains and dykes in the neighbourhood. Tradition reports that an engagement took place near this town between the Scots, under Wallace, and the English army, when the Scottish leader drove the invaders into a morass, where most of them perished. The trustees of the late James Dennistoun Mitchell esq. D.L., J.P. the trustees of the late William Allan-Woddrop esq. D.L., J.P. and James Joseph Stenton Maclaren esq. are the principal landowners. The parish is 6 miles in length by 3½ in breadth, embracing 7,282 statute acres; rateable value, £17,116; population in 1911, 1,931, of whom 1,326 are in the burgh.

BISHOPBRIGGS, a large village and suburb of Glasgow, is in the parish of Cadder.

For further particulars and names see Glasgow section.

BLACKWOOD, see LESMAHAGOW.

BLANTYRE is a parish, in the north-western part of the county and Middle ward, about 6 miles in length, with a coast line to the Clyde of about 2 miles and a half; it is bounded on the east by the parish of Hamilton, south by Glassford and west by East Kilbride and Cambuslang, and is in Hamilton poor combination and small debts court district. The parish has two stations, Blantyre and High Blantyre, on different sections of the Caledonian railway, and contains three villages, High Blantyre, Low Blantyre and Stonefield, all situated in a rich and fertile district. High Blantyre, the first of these, is 8 miles south-by-east from Glasgow, and between 2 and 3 west-by-north from Hamilton, on the road between the last-named town and East Kilbride. Low Blantyre, rather more than a mile distant in a north-easterly direction, was originally built and owned by Messrs. Henry Monteith & Co. dyers, but that firm is now extinct and the village gradually falling into decay. David Livingstone, the distinguished African explorer and missionary, was born in a small house in this village, March 19, 1813, his father having kept a small shop at Hamilton, while he himself was employed in the mills; he was admitted a Licentiate in Medicine and Surgery in 1838, and his African labours and travels, in connection with Dr. Moffat, and his meeting at a later period with Sir H. M. Stanley G.C.B. extended from 1840 to 1872, after which Livingstone continued his explorations alone, but died at Illala, 4th May, 1873; his remains, carried to Zanzibar by his native servants, were transferred to England and interred in Westminster Abbey, 18th April, 1874. Stonefield, formerly a separate village, but now included in Blantyre, is entirely the creation of the coal trade, and is principally inhabited by the miners employed in the numerous pits in the neighbourhood, belonging to Messrs. Merry and Cuninghame Limited and Messrs. Dixon Limited; it was in one of the pits belonging to Messrs. Dixon, at High Blantyre, that the great explosion of 22nd October, 1877, took place, causing the death of over 200 men and boys. This place, from 1606, afforded the title of Baron to a branch of the Stewart family, but on the death (17 Dec. 1900) of Charles, 12th Baron Blantyre, the title became extinct. At Blantyre are Established and two United Free churches, a Parish hall and a Mission hall, and at Stonefield, Established and United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, Congregational and Methodist chapels, a Gospel hall and Salvation Army barracks. The Cottage Hospital was erected in 1910, at a cost of £3,000. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited is established here. The ruins of Blantyre priory, founded early in the 13th century, stand on a rocky eminence on the south bank of the Clyde. At the Reformation, the priory was demolished, and its revenues, with the patronage of the parish church, given by James VI. to Walter Stewart, afterwards lord treasurer of Scotland, who was created, 10th July, 1606, Lord of Blantyre. South of High Blantyre, near the farm of Park, and in a very picturesque locality, is a spring strongly impregnated with sulphur: the water is of similar quality to that of St. Bernard's well, near Edinburgh; it was formerly much resorted to, and is still efficacious in the cure of scrofulous and scorbutic cases. The trustees of the late Lord Blantyre, A. Millar Bannatyne, the trustees of the late John Craig esq. John Jackson esq. and the trustees of the late Col. J. Clark-Forrest, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,956 acres; rateable value, £ . The population in 1901 was 14,145, and in 1911, 16,821 in the civil parish and 9,066 in the ecclesiastical parish.

STONEFIELD is a quoad sacra parish. Population in 1911, 7,755.

BOTHWELL is a parish and ancient village in the Middle ward, and Motherwell poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Hamilton, about 9 miles south-east from Glasgow and 2 miles north-west from Hamilton, with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways. The parish is about 8 miles and a half long by 4 broad; the great roads from Edinburgh to Glasgow, and from Glasgow to Carlisle, passing through it; and besides the river Clyde, it is intersected by the two Calder streams, which are beautifully wooded. Bothwell bridge, which spans the Clyde, is famous in Scottish history as the scene of an encounter between the royalist forces under the Duke of Monmouth K.G. and a formidable army of Covenanters, on the 22nd of June, 1679, in which the latter were totally defeated. The barony of Rothwell was conferred, in 1482, on Sir John Ramsay; the subsequent Earldom was held from 1488 to 1569 by the Hepburns, and from 1581 to 1592 by Francis Stewart, who forfeited it by treason. The ancient church of Bothwell was founded by Archibald "The Grim," Earl of Douglas, in 1398, as a collegiate church, with an endowment for a provost and eight prebendaries. The present parish church, erected by the heritors of the parish, is a conspicuous edifice in the Gothic style. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The "Clyde" is the chief hotel. The Kirkland Joint Lunatic Asylum, formerly conducted as a private asylum under Dr. Dean Fairless, was bought by the Glasgow District Board of Lunacy in 1878, and opened in 1881 as a district asylum for pauper patients, and contains over 200 beds. The James Donald Institute, opened in 1910, was a gift to the village by the late James Donald, of Bothwell. Bothwell Castle, the seat of the Earl of Home K.T., V.D., D.L., J.P. (Lord Lieutenant of the county), is a modern mansion standing in the midst of shrubberies and plantations, and near it, on an eminence, is the magnificent ruin of old Bothwell Castle, once an important Scottish fortress. Alexander Whitelaw esq. D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,595 acres; rateable value, £306,016; the population in 1901 was 45,904, and in 1911, 54,891, of which 680 were in Motherwell burgh, and including 36 officials and 217 inmates of Kirkland Asylum; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 17,021.

CARNBROE is a small village in the parish of Bothwell, a mile and a half from Coatbridge. The works in the neighbourhood afford employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The nearest railway station is at Whifflett, about a mile distant, on the Glasgow and Airdrie section of the Caledonian railway.

FALLSIDE is a hamlet in the parish of Bothwell, about 1 mile north-east from Bothwell village, with a station on the Carstairs Junction and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway.

The parish also contains the townships of Holytown, Newarthill, Carfin, Mossend, Bellshill, Uddingston, Tannochside, Thornwood and Nackerty.

CADDER is a parish, in the Lower ward, small debts court district of Glasgow, extending along the northern boundary of Lanarkshire, with Kirkintilloch and New Monkland on the east, New Kilpatrick on the west, Campsie on the north, and the parish of Glasgow on the south, and has stations at Gartcosh, Garnkirk, Steps Road and Robroyston on the Caledonian railway, and at Bishopbriggs on the North British railway, and is about 5 miles north from Glasgow. The great canal between the Forth and the Clyde passes through the parish for 5 miles and the river Kelvin washes its northern boundary to the extent of 6 miles. There is an Established church at Cadder and Established and United Free churches at STEPPS. Coal has been found on the estate of Cadder, and coal and very valuable fire clay on that of Garnkirk. Cawder House is the property and residence of Lt.-Col. Archibald Stirling esq. D.L.

CHRYSTON is a quoad sacra parish and a compact little village pleasantly situated on a considerable elevation about 6¼ miles from Coatbridge, and has Established and United Free churches. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. The nearest railway station is at Garnkirk, over a mile distant. Population in 1901, 4,456, and in 1911, 6,851.

MOODIESBURN is also a small village in this paraish.

GARTCOSH is a somewhat scattered village in this parish, about 4½ miles from Coatbridge, with a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the Caledonian railway. Here is the Episcopal Mission church of St. Andrew, attached to Baillieston. The population of the parish ward in 1911 was 2,680.

BISHOPBRIGGS is another village in the parish, 3½ miles north-east from Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and Edinburgh section of the North British railway. The population of the parish in 1911 was 3,071. For further particulars and names see Glasgow.

GARNKIRK is a village in the parish of Cadder, about 6 miles east-north-east from Glasgow and 3½ north-west from Coatbridge, with a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the Caledonian railway. The Heathfield and Cardowan Fire Clay Works Limited here form one of the largest manufactories of fire clay in Great Britain, and employ about 150 men. The quality of the fire clay on this property is quite equal to that of Stourbridge in Worcestershire, and bricks, furnace blocks, retorts and crucibles are exported in large quantities to nearly all parts of the world. The manufacture of glazed pipes for water and sanitary purposes and of ornamental articles, such as chimney cans, vases &c. is also extensively carried on at this establishment.

MUIRHEAD is a small village about 6 miles from Coatbridge, lying between Garnkirk, which is the nearest railway station, and Chryston. The population is included with Chryston.

CALDERCRUIX, see NEW MONKLAND.

CALTON, see GLASGOW.

CAMBUSLANG is a town and parish in the Middle ward, and small debts court district and poor combination of Hamilton; the parish contains the large mining villages of Hallside and Newton (which see), Flemington, Spittal Colliery, Newton Colliery, Westburn and Halfway, and is bounded on the east by the North Calder water, north by the Clyde, west by Carmunnock parish and south by East Kilbride parish; the town stands on the road from Glasgow to Hamilton, on the banks of the Clyde, and includes the suburbs of Kirkhill Coats, Silverbanks and Wellshott Hill; it has a station on the Glasgow and Lanark section of the Caledonian railway, and a station also a Kirkhill, and is 4 miles south-east from Glasgow; in 1872 it was supplied with water by gravitation. The "Auld Kirk," as it is termed, prior to the Reformation belonged to a prebend of Glasgow Cathedral; there was also at that time a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary; in 1565, the chaplain, Sir John Millar, made grants of certain property for its endowment, and these lands are still called "chapel lands." There is another Established church at West Cambuslang, besides United Free and Roman Catholic churches; the Episcopal church of St. Cuthbert is in Brownside road; the Rev. Louis Howard De Cas has been in charge since 1913. There are also Baptist and Congregational chapels and a Plymouth Brethren Mission hall. There is a Cemetery at Westburn in this parish. The Cambuslang Institute and Library, erected in 1891, at a cost of £3,000, has a library of upwards of 4,000 volumes. The inhabitants are for the most part engaged in the collieries and large iron and steel works of the neighbourhood. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited. A halfpenny newspaper is published here weekly. The annual agricultural show of the Cambuslang, Blantyre and Rutherglen Agricultural Society is held at Cambuslang on May 24th. In the south-east portion of the parish lies the famous "Dechmont Hill," referred to by Sir Walter Scott in the lines:—"Wight Wallace stood on Dechmont Hill, and blew his bugle round, till the wild bull in Cadzow wood had started at the sound." The Duke of Hamilton, Allan Barns-Graham and J. B. H. Montgomery esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,146 acres; rateable value, £153,320; the population in 1901 was 20,211, and in 1911, 24,864.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:—Parish church, 15,688, and West Church (formed from Cambuslang and Rutherglen), 5,619.

HALFWAY is a mining village.

FLEMINGTON, another mining village, lies close to Cambuslang town.

NEWTON COLLIERY, Spittal Colliery Rows, and Westburn are all hamlets in this parish.

CARLUKE (formerly a burgh of barony) is now a small town, and is a parish in the Upper ward, small debt court district of Lanark, with a station on the Caledonian railway, 32 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 20 south-east from Glasgow, 10 south-east from Hamilton, and 5 north-west from Lanark. The parish is bounded on the east by Carstairs parish, south by Lanark parish, west by the river Clyde, and north by the parish of Cambusnethan. The town contains several regular streets, Kirkton street, High street and Hamilton street, each having a number of fine stone buildings, and the shops are lighted with gas. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches, an Original Secession church, Congregational and Baptist chapels and two Mission halls. The Rankin Memorial hall, in High street, is a modern building erected on a site given by James Brownlie esq. Glasgow, who also contributed £1,000 towards the erection. The district is rich in coal, ironstone and limestone, all being of the best quality. The trade of the town and neighbourhood is chiefly confined to mining and agriculture. The banks of the Clyde have long been famous for the culture of fruit trees. Apples, pears, strawberries and gooseberries are produced in great abundance, and in higher perfection in this district than in any other in Scotland. The growing of strawberries and tomatoes now form prominent features in the industry of the district. A large portion of the produce is usually purchased by preserved fruit manufacturers, and great quantities are also forwarded to Glasgow. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a Savings Bank. There are also two steam corn mills, two steam saw mills, several brick works, a preserve factory, two engineering works, an iron foundry, boot and shoe works, two timber merchants, cabinet makers' works and a newspaper. The drill hall and armoury in Market road was erected for the Volunteers in 1895. There is a fever hospital at Roadmeetings, under the control of the County Council of the Upper Ward of Lanarkshire. Major-Gen. William Roy, an eminent mathematician, employed on the ordnance survey of Scotland and Great Britain, was born in this parish, 4th May, 1726, and died 1st June, 1790. Major Weir (the Wizard) was born, 1599, at Kirkton. A cattle show is held here yearly on the second Saturday in June. Mauldslie Castle is the seat of Lord Newlands, Vice-Lieutenant, and Milton Lockhart, of Mrs. Lockhart. The principal landowners are Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. M.V.O. Lord Newlands, Lord Lamington G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E. Mrs. Lockhart, Major James Stevenson-Hamilton D.L., J.P. the Earl of Home K.T., V.D. and the trustees of Sir Windham Frederick Carmichael Anstruther bart. who is a minor. The parish has an area of 15,313 acres; rateable value in 1915 was £61,779; population in 1901, 8,966, and in 1911, 9,619 in the civil parish and 7,751 in the ecclesiastical parish.

BRAIDWOOD is a small village in the parish of Carluke, 2 miles south-east from the town, and about half a mile to the right of the road to Lanark. Here is a steam saw mill and brick and tile works. Braidwood House, the property of Col. James Stevenson, is a handsome mansion of stone, and about half a mile nearer to the Clyde are the remains of a fortified structure, apparently of the eleventh and twelfth centuries, known as "Hall Bar," and consisting of a tower and keep in good preservation; it was thoroughly repaired some time since. Besides Braidwood there is a hamlet of Kilncadzow, at which place there is a board school. Population in 1911, 986.

CARMYLE, see OLD MONKLAND.

CARNBROE, see BOTHWELL.

CARNWATH is a parish, small town and burgh of barony, on the main road between Lanark and Edinburgh, with a station on the Edinburgh and Carstairs section of the Caledonian railway, and is in the Upper ward, and the small debt-court district of Lanark, 25 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 30 south-east from Glasgow, 7 north-west from Biggar, and the same distance east from Lanark. It consists of one street, nearly three-quarters of a mile in length, in the middle of which stand the tolbooth, a plain old building, and in front of it an obelisk, on which the distances from Edinburgh to various places in Clydesdale and Ayrshire are indicated. This place, since 1628, has given the title of Earl to the Dalzell family; the peerage was forfeited by the 6th Earl, in 1715, but was restored in 1826 to Robert Alexander Dalzell, who then became 7th Earl of Carnwath. Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. M.V.O. of Lee and Carnwath, is superior of the burgh. The estate is held of the Crown, on payment of a pair of red hose, which are run for annually on the day succeeding the August fair, and followed by athletic games, to the successful competitors for superiority in which are awarded medals and prizes in money. The remains of the ancient church stand at the west end of the town, and a portion of the building is used as a sepulchre for the Lockhart family; it contains the remains of the Somervilles, former lords of the manor, and includes a tomb of the 15th century, with the effigy of one of these in complete armour, and another of his wife in the costume of the period. Close to Carnwath House and adjoining the Gallows' Hill is an old sepulchral mound. The present church erected in 1866, on the site of the former one, erected about 1798, is a building of freestone, in the Gothic style, and will seat 1,000 persons. There are also United Free churches. About a mile to the north-west of Carnwath are the scattered ruins of Couthally Castle, in former ages the seat of the Somervilles. Carnwath House is the seat of Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. M.V.O., D.L., J.P. In one of the rooms here Prince Charles Edward remained for two entire days on his retreat from Derby to Culloden in 1746. Kersewell is the residence of Frank Warrack esq. J.P. The principal landowners are Col. Sir S. M. Lockhart bart. William Bertram esq. Lieut.-Col. Robert J. Logan J.P. James Hamilton esq. and John Purdie-Somerville esq. J.P. The parish is bounded on the east by Dunsyre parish, north by Edinburghshire, west by the Mouse river, and south by the river Medwin. The area is 30,468 acres; rateable value, £45,000; population in 1911, 3,446 in the civil parish and 3,741 in the ecclesiastical parish.

CARSTAIRS is a parish and small village, in the Upper ward, small debts court district of Lanark, on the road from Edinburgh to Lanark, about a mile east from Carstairs Junction on the Caledonian railway, 4 north-east from Lanark and 3 west of Carnwath. The Mouse water flows through the centre of the parish, which is bounded on the east by Carnwath parish, south by the river Clyde, west by Lanark and Carluke parishes. The three fairs formerly held here, having gradually declined, are now altogether discontinued. From the number and magnitude of the architectural and other Roman remains which have been discovered here, it is assumed that the place must have been one of importance during the Roman period. There is an Established church. Carstairs House is the seat of Sir John Westall King bart. J.P. The principal landowners are Sir John Westall King bart. Mrs. M. C. Eliott-Lockhart, Col. COATBRIDGE

COATBRIDGE is a populous town and municipal burgh in the parish of Old Monkland, as altered by order of the Secretary of Scotland, and in the Middle ward and small debt court district of Airdrie, on the Glasgow and Edinburgh road, with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, 8 miles east from Glasgow and 2 west from Airdrie. The burgh includes the quoad sacra parishes of Coatdyke, Coats, Dundyvan, Garturk and Gartsherrie, in Old Monkland parish, and is divided into five wards. The Monkland canal passes through. There are four Established and seven United Free churches, three Roman Catholic churches, and an Evangelical Union church. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1843, will seat 368 persons; the rectory, net value £220, has been held since 1915 by the Rev. Arthur Inglis M.A. of St. Andrews University; there are also Baptist, Congregational and Wesleyan chapels, two Mission halls, and Salvation Army barracks. The Municipal Buildings, at the top of Dunbeth road, form a fine stone structure, elaborately fitted and furnished and including a Town Hall. The Technical School was erected by the Monkland School Board, at a cost of about £7 000, and opened in 1891. The Theatre Royal, a substantial building of stone, is open from August to May and will hold 2,000 persons. The Institute at Gartsherrie, erected at a cost of £5,000, was the gift of William Weir esq. of Kildonan, and is a building of stone, containing spacious reading and billiard rooms, swimming and private baths. The Alexander Hospital, at Blairhill station, erected by the late John Alexander esq. first provost of Coatbridge, at a cost of £9,000, and opened in March, 1899, is intended for the reception of accidents of all kinds; it contains male, female and private wards, and is fitted with all the latest improvements needed for such an institution. The building was designed and carried out under the supervision of Mr. Alex. McG. Mitchell, architect, of Coatbridge. The Carnegie Free Public Library, in Academy street, is a substantial building with reading rooms and a reference library. The Stewart Institute, situate in the main street, was erected by the Stewart family, and handed over to the Town Council; it comprises billiard, reading and recreation rooms. At Gartsherrie, Calder, Carnbroe, Langloan and Summerlee are iron works on an extensive scale, affording employment to large numbers of the inhabitants. Coatbridge is an important centre for the manufacture of iron tubes, malleable iron and steel, and there are several large engineering and iron founding establishments. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. Drumpellier House is the residence of Lieut.-Col.

Arthur Louis Hamilton Carrick-Buchanan: Gartsherrie, the residence of Ronald Sherwin Holden Stuart Rae Colt B.A., J.P. Douglas Support (Rosehall), the seat of Mrs Gretch. Sir Barrington Bulkley Douglas Campbell Douglas K.C.B., C.V.O., D.L., J.P. is a mansion of stone in the Scottish baronial style, in an estate of about 1,000 acres, and is beautifully situated on the banks of the North Calder. The house is surrounded with undulating and well laid out pleasure grounds of about 100 acres, richly timbered and containing some very fine beech trees, and a "Weeping Hornbeam," believed to be the only specimen of its kind known. The residence can be traced back to the early 17th century, when it originally formed part of the estate of Dalziel, and was purchased by Margaret, Duchess of Douglas, who, by her testament, left the estate to Archibald Douglas, of Mains, Dumbartonshire, from whom the present holder is directly descended. Coal is the chief mineral wrought. The area of the burgh is 1,847 acres; rateable value, burghal, £219,000; landward, £116,424 7s. 9d. The population in 1901 was 36,991, and in 1911 30,283 including 262 inmates of which 7 were in the Lunatic wards and 23 were in Old Monkland Poorhouse.

The population of the wards in 1911 was:—First, 6,592; Second, 8,242; Third, 7,472; Fourth, 9,473; Fifth, 11,507.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:—Coatdyke, 6,177; Coats, 5,478; Dundyvan, 9,154; Gartsherrie, 10,223; Garturk, 6,234.

DOUGLAS is a parish and village, in the Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark, on the south side of the Douglas water, and on the road from Edinburgh to Ayr, with two stations, viz., Douglas, 4 miles north, and Douglas West, 1¼ miles north-west, both on the Lanark and Muirkirk section of the Caledonian railway, 41 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 31 south-south-east from Glasgow and 12 south from Lanark. The parish, which extends on the west to Ayrshire, is well watered, for besides the Douglas water there are three minor streams which fall into it, previous to its junction with the Clyde about 7 miles below the village, which consists of several narrow irregular streets, and is well lighted with gas. Near the centre, and within a burial ground, stand the remains of the ancient parish church of St. Bride, which contains monuments of some of the great chiefs of the house of Douglas. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch here. The parish abounds in limestone, freestone and coal. Near the village, on the bank of the river, stands Douglas Castle, the residence of the Earl of Home K.T. Lord Lieutenant of Lanarkshire. The old castle was burned down in 1760, and the present edifice was begun in 1761, from designs by Robert Adam, the distinguished architect. The Earl of Home K.T. and John Paterson are the principal landowners. The parish has an area of 34,105 acres; rateable value, £22,492; population, 1911, 2,509.

RIGSIDE is a small village in the parish of Douglas, and 4 miles north-east from Douglas village, on the road from Edinburgh to Ayr. The old village has been practically cleared away, and most of the houses pulled down. A new village of one hundred and fifty-eight houses has been erected near Ponfeigh station by the Coltness Iron Co. Limited for their workmen in their extensive collieries, and it also abounds with rich and productive beds of iron-stone, limestone and fireclay. The United Free church, with manse attached, was built in 1885, at a total cost of about £1,300, and is an edifice in the Gothic style, seating about 200.

INCHES is a village in this parish, with a station on the Lanark and Muirkirk section of the Caledonian railway.

HAMILTON

HAMILTON is an ancient town and parliamentary burgh and parish, the head of a poor law combination and small debt court district, and the chief town in the Middle Ward of the county, with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, 37 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, 10½ south-south-east from Glasgow, 15 north-west from Lanark, 8 south from Airdrie and 7 north from Strathaven. The town lies along the base of a rising ground, extending nearly a mile in length, and consists of several streets of substantial, well-built houses, including a new thoroughfare forming a continuation of the London road, and crossing the ravine, dividing the old and new towns, which are connected by Cadzow bridge, widened and improved in 1903; the town is lighted with gas and electricity and supplied with water from works belonging to the Town Council. It was erected into a burgh of barony in the 15th century by one of the Hamiltons, lords of Cadzow; Queen Mary created it a royal burgh in 1548, but the rights and privileges thus acquired were afterwards resigned into the hands of Anne, Duchess of Hamilton, who, in 1670, restored to the community its former franchises, and erected it into a burgh of regality dependent on herself and her successors. It is now a Parliamentary burgh, and in connection with Lanark, Airdrie, Falkirk and Linlithgow, it forms the Falkirk Parliamentary district, constituted by the "Reform Act of 1832," and returning one member. Under the "Municipal Corporations (Scotland) Acts" (3 and 4 William IV. c.c. 76 and 77) the government of the burgh is vested in a provost, four bailies and ten councillors. The magistrates and justices of peace hold regular courts for the trial of minor offences.

The parish church was made collegiate in 1451, by Sir James Hamilton, for a provost and prebendary. There are also two other Established churches, seven United Free churches, two Roman Catholic churches, Baptist, Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels, and several Mission halls. The Episcopal church of St. Mary the Virgin, built in 1849, will seat 390 persons; the Rev. Edward Archibald Forbes M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1910.

The Old Grammar School of Hamilton was founded by the ducal family of Hamilton early in the 16th century. It stood near the old churchyard, adjoining the present palace, and was endowed by Lord John Hamilton in 1588 with £20 Scots. In 1714, Anne, Duchess of Hamilton, built a school (now called the Old Grammar School), endowing it with an annual sum of £11 2s. 4d. the Town Council being the sole managers. The present school, erected in 1848 by the Town Council, the heritors of the parish of Hamilton, and subscribers was then called the "Hamilton Academy." In 1866 the subscribers handed over their interest in it, on certain conditions, to the Town Council, who, with the heritors, continued to be the governing body till 1872, when, by the Education (Scotland) Act of that year, it was transferred to the burgh school board, who, in 1876, erected it into a higher-class school; in 1890 various alterations and extensions were made to the buildings, but in 1898 these were unfortunately wrecked. A new school was built in 1913 at a cost of £53,000.

The Municipal Buildings, completed in 1915, are in Cadzow street.

The Town Hall is a building in the Classic style.

The Post Office is in Brandon street. The district offices, in Beckford street, adjoin the County Buildings, and were erected for the district of the Middle Ward, and contain offices for the district clerk, district engineer, sanitary inspector, water engineer, inspector of buildings and medical officer of health.

The Victoria Hall, in Quarry street, erected in 1887, at a cost of £4,000, is an edifice of red freestone, and the main hall will hold 1,500 persons.

There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited and Farrow's Bank Limited.

The weekly market for Hamilton is held on Friday. The hiring and cattle markets are held on the third Friday in April and the third Friday in October; and the annual cattle show in the month of June.

There is a hospital, in Muir street, for four old people, endowed by the late Mr. Aikman, of Ross. To the west of the town, on the road to Bothwell, are barracks.

In Almada street is a Soldiers' Home, containing reading and recreation rooms.

At the junction of Muir street and Cadzow street stands a fountain which has been presented to the town by Sir John Watson bart. of Earnock; it is of Aberdeen and Peterhead granite, from designs by Mr. Gavin Paterson, of Hamilton, and consists of an octagonal base, from which rise eight columns of polished Peterhead granite, carrying a circular ogee-shaped dome. There are four recessed drinking basins, and the remaining sides are filled in with bronze panels, two ornamented with heraldic devices and one containing a medallion portrait of the donor. In the centre of the base, under the dome, is a bronze figure representing Industry. The total height is 22 feet.

In August, 1895, a public park of 23 acres was presented to the burgh by the late Duke of Hamilton K.T. (d. 1895), and in 1907 it was enlarged by 9 acres, the gift of James Dixon esq. of Bothwell.

The Liberal Club, in Brandon street, built in 1892, contains reading and billiard rooms, and an assembly room for meetings, dances &c.

The Public Library, erected in 1907, at a cost of £15,000, and gifted to the burgh by Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, contains lending and reference libraries reading and recreation rooms, a lecture hall and ladies' reading room; there are over 14,000 volumes. Public Baths and Washhouses were erected by the Corporation in 1909 at a cost of £11,000. Electric tramways now run through the town and connect it with Motherwell, Wishaw and Newmains, Bothwell and Uddingston and Larkhall, and to Blantyre and Cambuslang, in connection with Glasgow.

Hamilton Palace, the seat of the Duke of Hamilton, with its surrounding park and pleasure grounds, magnificently wooded covers an area of about 1,400 acres; the palace is a stately mansion in the Renaissance style, and contains many fine apartments, but some of the pictures, ornaments &c. were disposed of by auction in London in the month of June, 1882, by order of the 12th Duke of Hamilton. The mausoleum in the palace grounds, in which lie the remains of various members of the Hamilton family, is a magnificent structure, erected at a cost of £160,000 and has bronze doors, richly ornamented. At the entrance to the vaults above the doorway are two colossal lions, each sculptured from a single block of stone, and the key-stones of the arches are carved Immortality. In the middle of the great park, one mile from the town, on a rock overhanging the Avon, stand the ruins of Cadzow Castle, the ancient manor house.

Cadzow wood, or forest, in this parish, is the home of a famous breed of wild, white cattle, and it is said to be a condition appendant to the title of Duke of Hamilton that the breed should be maintained in this forest.

In the vicinity of the town is Barncluith, the seat of William C. Bishop; Earnock House, the seat of Lady Watson; Neisland, that of Mr. T. W. Watson; the Ross estate, owned by Col. Thomas S. H. Robertson Aikman D.L., J.P. and Udston estate, owned by Jackson Russell esq.

The Duke of Hamilton, the Town Council and Lady Watson are the principal landowners, the former being the lord of the manor. The parish of Hamilton embraces an area of 13,129 acres; rateable value, landward £128,826, burghal £157,456; the population in 1901 was 40,372 and in 1911, 46,419. The area of the burgh is 1,332 acres; population in 1901, 32,775 and in 1911, 38,644, and of the Wards:—First, 8,145; Second, 7,224; Third, 7,788; Fourth, 5,685; Fifth, 9,802.

Included in the total population was 365 military and 169 other occupants in the barracks and 215 inmates and 19 officials in the Poorhouse.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was, parish church, 16,577 and Quarter, 2,070.

The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 38,276; number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 6,454.

EAST KILBRIDE is a burgh of barony, village and parish, in the Middle Ward, Hamilton poor combination and small debt court district; the village, on the road from Glasgow to Muirkirk, is 8 miles south by road from Glasgow and 10¾ by rail, between 6 & 7 west from Hamilton and 45 west-by-south from Edinburgh, and has a station on the Glasgow and East Kilbride branch of the Caledonian railway; there are also three other stations in the parish, viz.: Busby, 4 miles north-west; Thornton Hall, 3, and Hairmyres 1¾ west from the village. The parish, which comprehends the abrogated parish of Torrance, contains some extensive lime works, and coal also lies beneath the surface. Under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," boundary orders 75 and 137, a part of the parish of Cathcart has been transferred to East Kilbride. There is an Established church and two United Free churches. Kilbride has produced several eminent men, among whom are Dr. William Hunter M.D., F.R.S. born 23 May, 1718, died 30 March, 1783, and his brother, John Hunter F.R.S. the celebrated anatomist and physiologist, born 14 July, 1728; he was at first a student at Chelsea Hospital and subsequently for some time a member of St. Mary Hall, Oxford, and his portrait hangs in the old dining hall there, now, with the other buildings of the Hall, forming a part of Oriel College, Oxford: he died 16 Oct. 1793, and an oration in his honour is annually delivered at the Royal College of Surgeons, in London. The cattle show, which is held on the first Friday after the 10th of June, for Clydesdale horses and Ayrshire cattle, is the only fair that takes place in East Kilbride. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. Busby is a village and railway station at the north-western extremity of the parish, partly in this county, but chiefly in Renfrewshire. The principal landowners are the Scottish Wholesale Co-operative Society, Lady Sophia C. Allenby Montgomerie and Mrs. Harington-Stuart. The area comprises 23,677 acres; rateable value, £47,891; population in 1911, 3,977 in the civil parish and 3,241 in the ecclesiastical parish.

LANARK

LANARK (W. llannerch, a clearing in a forest) is a royal burgh, market town, the seat of a presbytery, and the chief town in the Upper ward, the head of a poorhouse combination, and a parish on the main road leading from Stirling to Carlisle, one mile above the left bank of the river Clyde, with a station on a branch of the Caledonian railway connecting the burgh with the main line at Carstairs, and affording easy communication with Edinburgh and Glasgow, and also by a direct route with Ayr on the west; it is 32 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 27 south-east from Glasgow, 15 south-east from Hamilton, 35 from Stirling, 47 from Ayr, and 12 north-west from Biggar, and may be considered as the centre of the Lowlands. The parish is bounded on the east and south by the river Clyde, and on the north and west by the parishes of Carstairs and Carluke. An old arched bridge, of unknown origin, spans the Mouse or Moss water near its junction with the Clyde, a short distance north west of the town, and from this point a fine view is obtained of Cartland bridge (erected in 1822, from designs by Thomas Telford F.R.S. the celebrated engineer and Cartland Crags. The town occupies an elevated site about half a mile north east of the Clyde; all the older streets viz. High street, Wellgate, Castlegate, Broomgate, Bloomgate, Wyde close, radiate from a central space called the "Cross." The High street, a wide thoroughfare, extends eastward to the "Port," and is continued by St. Leonard street, which leads to Carstairs, and by Bannatyne street, conducting to the railway station. Hope street branches off from Bloomgate and leads to Cleghorn. Westport is a continuation of Bloomgate and conducts to the Old and New Carluke roads. The burgh is encircled by a series of narrow lanes, called the North Vennel, the South Vennel, The Delves, Friars' or Arnold lane, Greystonebalks and others. The road from Stirling to Carlisle traverses the parish from west to east, and the Mouse water, which rises in the moorlands, 8 miles distant, flows through the parish and falls into the Clyde, about a mile west of the borough; on the banks of this stream are the deep and finely wooded ravines of Cleghorn and the famous Cartland Crags. The town is lighted with gas, and an abundant supply of excellent water is obtained from the Pinto range of hills, 7 miles distant. The original charter of the burgh seems to have been granted by Alexander I. (1107-24); and in the reign of Malcolm (1153-65) the town appears to have been regarded as a royal burgh, many of the ancient kings of Scotland having made Lanark their place of residence. The charter was finally confirmed by Charles I. in 1632, and the town is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and 15 councillors. A sheriff court is held in the County Buildings every Tuesday and Friday during the session, and small debt and debts recovery court on Tuesdays. Here are also held the meetings of the County Council for the Upper ward. Lanark, together with Falkirk, Hamilton, Linlithgow and Airdrie, forms the Falkirk parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, and returning one member. The landward parish is included in the South Lanarkshire parliamentary division, which also sends one member to Parliament. The old parish church, now in ruins, stands within its burying ground, on the south-east border of the town. Tradition asserts that in this church Sir William Wallace first saw Marion Braidfoot, who subsequently became his wife. In the cemetery which surrounds the ruins of the church was interred William Lithgow, a celebrated and eccentric traveller of the reigns of Queen Elizabeth, James VI. and Charles I., born at Lanark about 1582. After traversing a great portion of Europe and Asia he was tortured and committed to prison by order of the Spanish Inquisition, but eventually returned, though in a crippled condition, and settled in his native parish till his death, about 1645. The modern parish church, which stands in the centre of the main street, is a plain rectangular structure of two storeys with a square projecting turret at the east end, the lower stage of which forms a porch; in the belfry are 2 bells: in a niche over the entrance is a statue of Wallace, executed by Forrest, a self-taught genius and a native of the district, and presented by him to the town. There is a Mission Church at New Lanark, erected in 1899. On Sat. 13 April, 1907, the beautiful church of St. Mary was almost entirely destroyed by fire. The Episcopal church of Christchurch is in Hope street. The Rev. William Towers Lyon M.A. of King's College, Cambridge, has been priest in charge since 1914. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches and an Evangelical Union chapel. The fountain, in the Horse market, was erected by public subscription in commemoration of the Jubilee in 1887 of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. The County Buildings, in Hope street, erected in 1836 at a cost of £5,000, are of freestone, in the Classic style, and contain court rooms and a series of offices. The premises of the Young Men's Christian Association were erected at a cost of £2,000. In the town is a live stock auction mart belonging to Messrs. Lawrie and Symington Limited, at which important sales of Ayrshire dairy cattle and fat stock are held weekly on Monday, and large sales of store sheep, cattle and Clydesdale horses during the season. This is the recognised centre for the sale of black-faced sheep and lambs, the largest sales in the country being held here during the season. The fairs, still observed, are as follows:—First Tuesday and Wednesday of June, rough sheep; (Glasgow Fair) Saturday, Cattle Show; second Tuesday in August, lambs; 17th and 18th August, black-faced lambs; 31st August and 1st September, lambs; second Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in October, Show and Sale of Clydesdale horses. Horse races are held in September on an extensive and excellent course, about a mile and a half east of the town. Lady Hosier's Convalescent Home was opened July 10th, 1893, by the late Baron Newlands (d. 1906), who presented a donation of £10,000 towards the endowment of the institution as a memorial to Frances, his wife, who died in 1891; the home is available for 42 inmates, and is connected with the Western Infirmary, Glasgow. Bellefield Sanatorium was founded in 1904 by the Glasgow and District branch of the National Association for the Prevention of Consumption, at a cost of over £20,000, and transferred to the Glasgow Corporation in November, 1914; there are 52 beds, and upwards of 150 patients are treated annually. The Lindsay Institute, in Hope street, opened in 1914, was erected and endowed by the late Charles Lindsay at a cost of about £7,000; it contains reading, reference and lending rooms, also a billiards room; there are about 5,000 volumes. There was anciently a castle here, which stood on an apparently artificial mound at the foot of the Castlegate, but the site is now converted into a public bowling green. In the vicinity is Lanark Loch, a fine expanse of water, some 24 acres in extent, the shores of which have been embanked and planted, a pavilion built and a delightful promenade laid out, which is much frequented by the inhabitants. Numerous boats and steam launches ply on the loch for the pleasure of visitors. Adjoining the loch is Lanark Moor; on the upper moor races are held; the lower moor is used as a golfing green, and also affords ample space for cricket and football. The neighbourhood presents much fine scenery, including the romantic grounds of Bonnington, Cartland Crags and the Falls of Clyde; these last are three in number, viz.: Bonnington Falls, divided into two by a rocky islet; Corra Linn, where the water takes three distinct leaps, making a descent altogether of 84 feet, and Stonebyres Falls, three miles further down stream. In the parish are traces of ancient Roman camps and of a Roman road, the famous Watling Street, and indications of lake dwellings were met with in 1808 on Hyndford farm. The Lee is the seat of Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. M.V.O.; the mansion is in the Scottish castellated style, with a round tower at each angle; in the grounds are some very fine oak and larch trees; one of the latter planted in 1739 is now 100 feet high and 18 feet in girth; here is preserved a curious stone, traditionally taken from the Saracens in 1329, and called the "Lee Penny;" it is reputed to possess healing virtues, and is said to have suggested to Sir Walter Scott the idea of his celebrated novel, "The Talisman." Behind the Clydesdale Hotel are the Assembly Rooms, erected in 1827 on the site of a Franciscan monastery. Handloom weaving, formerly the general occupation, has almost entirely ceased, but there are several hosiery factories and a tannery. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the British Linen Bank. The principal hotel is the "Clydesdale."

Cleghorn House is the residence of Mrs Eliott-Lockhart; Stanmore, of Sir John Westall King bart. J.P.; Jerviswood House is the property of the Earl of Haddington K.T., A.D.C. The Earl of Haddington, Sir Charles Henry A. F. Ross bart. Mrs. Eliott-Lockhart, Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. M.V.O. Sir John Westall King bart. J.P., J. Noble Graham esq. D.L., J.P. Charles Walker esq. J.P., C. J. Edmonstoune Cranstoun esq. D.L., J.P. and Allan James Crawford Farie esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 10,390 acres; rateable value, burgh, £32,391; landward, £22,832; total, £55,223; the population of the civil parish in 1901, 8,103; ecclesiastical parish, 4,564; royal burgh, 6,440, and in 1911 was: civil, 8,978, and ecclesiastical, 4,977. The area of the burgh is 506 acres; rateable value, £ ; population in 1901, 6,440 and in 1911, 5,900. Included in the total civil population were 63 inmates and 3 officials in the Poorhouse, 71 patients and 17 officials in St. Mary's Hospital and 64 in Smyllum Orphanage for the Deaf and Dumb.

The population of St. Leonard's ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 4,001.

The population of the parliamentary borough in 1911 was 5,559.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 851.

NEW LANARK is a village, 1 mile south from Lanark, and on the same side of the Clyde, and in the parish, Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark. It originated in 1783-4, when Richard Arkwright and Mr. David Dale built cotton mills here, and constructed a subterranean aqueduct, about 100 yards in length, through the solid rock, by which means the waters of the Clyde were conducted to the sloping plain on which the mills and the village now stand. Robert Owen, chiefly known as a social reformer, was in his earlier years a partner in the cotton mills in this village. Acreage, population and rateable value included with Lanark.

LEADHILLS is a village and a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parishes of Crawford and Crawfordjohn, in the Upper ward, and is on the road from Glasgow to Dumfries, with a station on the Elvanfoot and Wanlockhead section of the Caledonian railway, 46 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 41 south from Glasgow and 15 south from Douglas, and has Established and United Free churches. There is a branch here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, a Masonic Hall and a Miners' Library. The place derives its name from the lead mines hereabouts, which have produced in some years 18,000 bars, of nine stone (avoirdupois) the bar; in the year 1913, according to the "Mineral Statistics," 1,331 tons of lead ore were raised, from which 1,049 tons of lead was obtained on smelting, and 4,058 ounces of silver. Gold was found in the mountain sands in an early period, and in 1881 the miners of Leadhills, during their spare hours, collected a quantity weighing 1,000 grains, and presented it to the Earl of Hopetoun, afterwards 1st Marquess of Linlithgow, on the attainment of his majority. Allan Ramsay, the poet, was born here 13 October, 1685, and subsequently became a bookseller in Edinburgh; he died 7 Jan. 1758. A monument was erected here to Symington, a native of Leadhills, who first applied steam to navigation. Fairs used to be held on the second Friday of June and the last Friday of October, and both days are still observed as general holidays. The Marquess of Linlithgow is lord of the manor. The population in 1911 of the ecclesiastical parish was 849.

LENZIE is partly in the parish of Cadder, in the county of Lanark, and partly in the parish of Kirkintilloch, in Dumbartonshire, and will be found in the latter county.

LESMAHAGOW is a parish and village in the Upper ward of the county and in Lanark small debts court district, with a station on a branch of the Caledonian railway from Glasgow and Hamilton, the village, also called Abbey Green, is on the river Nethan, a tributary of the Clyde, and is 38 miles west from Edinburgh, 23 south-east from Glasgow and 6 south-west from Lanark; the parish is 12 miles square, and bounded on the north-east by the river Clyde, south-east by the Douglas and Poniel waters, and north-west by the Kype water; it abounds in coal, ironstone and limestone, in the working of which a considerable number of the inhabitants find employment; a line of railway, for this traffic only, passes through or near most of the mines, and joins the Caledonian main line at Motherwell. A line of the Caledonian railway was constructed in 1903 between Lesmahagow and Darvell and passing through Strathaven. The parish church, erected by the heritors of the parish in 1808, stands on part of the site of the priory, and in 1899 was internally restored, at a cost of about £3,500. The British Linen Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here. The principal hotels are the Abbey Green, the Commercial, the Royal, and the Masons' Arms, all of which are also posting houses. Two hiring fairs and two others for general business are held during the year. A market, known as Big Wednesday is held in the month of December. Here was anciently a priory, founded by David I. in 1140, and dedicated to St. Machutus. The noble ruins of Craignethan, or Draphane Castle, the property of the Earl of Home, are immortalised by Sir Walter Scott in "Old Mortality," under the name of "Tillietudlem Castle," and a room in the castle is still shown as that in which the unfortunate Queen Mary took refuge after her escape from Lochleven Castle, in 1567. The Duke of Hamilton, the Earl of Home K.T., V.D. and J. C. Hope-Vere esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area is 41,311 acres; assessable value, £72,005; population in 1901, 10,954 and 1911, 11,990 in the civil parish, and 10,489 in the ecclesiastical parish.

COALBURN is a mining village, about 4 miles south of Abbey Green, with a station on the Lesmahagow branch of the Caledonian railway, and has a United Free church.

CROSSFORD is a village in a beautiful valley on the left bank of the river Clyde, and near its confluence with the Nethan; it is about 5 miles north-by-east from Abbey Green and 4½ north-west from Lanark, and has two United Free churches and a Baptist chapel.

KIRKMUIRHILL and BLACKWOOD are villages adjacent to each other, about 3 miles north-west from Abbey Green, on the Glasgow road, and at Blackwood is a station on the Caledonian railway. At Kirkmuirhill is a United Free church, and at Blackwood a Roman Catholic church. BOGHEAD is a village, about 1½ miles distant from Kirkmuirhill; the inhabitants of which are principally employed in Dunluff Stone Quarry. AUCHENHEATH, a mining village, is about 3 miles north from Abbey Green, and has a station on the Caledonian railway.

SHETTLESTON is a district, quoad sacra parish and considerable village, in the county of Lanark, 2½ miles east-north-east from Glasgow and 1 mile from Tollcross, on the road to Edinburgh, with a station on the Clydebank and Airdrie section of the North British railway, and one at Carntyne (for Westmuir) on the same line. The district is 4 miles in length, with an average breadth of 3 miles, and has an area of about 5,000 acres. It is in the parish of Glasgow, Lower ward of Lanarkshire and justice of the peace count of Glasgow. The surface is varied and the soil generally fertile; there are coal mines and sandstone quarries, and these, together with agriculture, weaving and engineering, employ the chief part of the population. The Monkland canal passes through. The established church was built in 1903, and seats about 1,100 persons. The church of St. Michael in CARNTYNE, was built in 1914: there are also two Roman Catholic churches, besides Baptist and Primitive Methodist chapels; meeting rooms for Plymouth Brethren, Salvation Army Barracks and a Rechabites Good Templars' Hall. There are also United Free churches at Carntyne, Eastbank and Sandyhills, and at Lightburn is a joint Fever Hospital. Capt. Robert Tennant left £460 for the poor of this place. Lieut.-Col. Arthur Louis Hamilton Carrick-Buchanan, John H. Cassells J.P. and Maj. W. Alexander-Gray M.P. are the principal landowners. The population in 1901 was 29,177, and in 1911, 30,802. TOLLCROSS is a place in Shettleston ecclesiastical parish.

By the Glasgow Boundary Act, 1912, which came into operation Nov. 5th, 1912, part of Shettleston ecclesiastical parish, containing at the 1911 census a population of 26,114, was added to Glasgow City.

STRATHAVEN is a market town and burgh of barony, on the river Avon, in the parish of Avondale and in the Middle ward and small debts court district of Hamilton, with a station on a branch from Blantyre station on the Caledonian railway, 44 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 15 south-by-east from Glasgow, 28 north-east from Ayr, 21 east-by-north from Kilmarnock, 14 west from Lanark and 7½ south from Hamilton. The town was erected into a burgh of barony in the year 1450, by William, Earl of Douglas. There is an Established church, three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and Mission halls. The local trade is chiefly in cheese and grain, and the silk, cotton and hosiery goods manufactured here. The Public Park was the gift of the late Rev. James Allan, and Allison Green was presented by the late James Allison esq. of Oakey, Australia. Here are the ruins of Strathaven Castle, formerly a place of great strength and occupied by the Douglas and Hamilton families. A new branch of the Caledonian railway was opened in 1905 from Lesmahagow, via Stonehouse, to Darvell, and passing through Strathaven. The auction mart, which is held on Tuesday, is well attended. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. On the south side of the river Avon remains of a Roman road can be distinctly traced for several miles. Population in 1911, 3,494.
